APPROVES NEW EIGHT BILLION DEFENSE BILL

Committee Action Would Get Total Outlay at Nearly $70,000,000,000.

INCLUDES LEND-LEASE

Measure For More Munitions, British Aid Now Goes To Lower House.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—An additional $8,243,839,031 appropriation—almost entirely for defense but including lend-lease funds for a vast increase in production of tanks and guns for British and Russian forces—was approved today by the house appropriations committee.

The huge new outlay would bring the total of cash and contract authorizations provided for defense since July 1, 1940 to the staggering sum of $67,990,254,096.

In recommending the new expenditure, the committee turned down a request by the war department for broader leeway in transferring to other countries, on a lend-lease basis, equipment purchased for the army with funds appropriated since last March 11, the date of enactment of the lend-lease act.

Instead, the committee recommended a $1,556,496,246 increase in the $12,985,000,000 already appropriated for the lend-lease program and proposed that the army be authorized to transfer as much as $500,000,000 worth of additional equipment if the military situation warranted it.

Both funds would provide tanks, anti-aircraft material, anti-tank weapons and artillery, combat vehicles, small arms and ammunition, the committe said, and Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, declared their production in large quantities was essential "if the necessary superiority of force is to be obtained over the Axis powers."

In addition to $6,687,369,046 for the war department and lend-lease, the bill carried $1,129,870,000 in cash and contractual authority for the navy, including $449,720,000 for 2,020 additional airplanes and $120,000,000 for gun mounts, ammunition storage and other items in connection with the proposed arming of about 1,000 American Merchant ships, and $280,000,000 for about 400 patrol and mine-laying vessels.

Clothing Ignited At Furnace, Woman Dies at Crestline

CRESTLINE—Burns sustained when her clothing caught fire while burning waste paper in a furnace claimed the life today of Miss Mary T. Malatto, 32, of 126 Lincoln avenue.

Miss Malatto died in Emergency hospital here late last night. She had been taken there by a brother, Anthony, who arrived home from work about the time the accident occurred and found his sister lying on the basement floor her clothing in flames. He smothered the fire with a rug.

An open furnace door and a partly filled waste paper basket indicated that she had been burning paper. The accident occurred about 5 p. m. She was alone in the home at the time.

Survivors included her widowed mother, Mary; two brothers, Anthony and Joseph, both of Crestline, and three sisters, Sister Mary Vincent of Akron, Rosemary at home, and Antoinette of Hartford, Conn.

Council to Demand Share of Sales Tax Fund for Use at City Airport

Santa Pays Early Visit To 180 City Employes; Get $22,000 Pay Hike

Democratic Lame-Duck Council Gives Approval to Wage Adjustments to Take Effect Jan. 1; Republicans Also Vote for Legislation.

By WILLIAM F. MURRAY

A Democratic lame-duck city council reached far down into the Christmas gift bag at its last regular meeting last night and, playing Santa Claus, it pulled out salary adjustments and increases for approximately 180 city employes.

The salary changes represent an increase of about $22,000 in the city's payroll or a general rise of 6.6 per cent bringing total salary allotment for appointive employes to approximately $344,000 for 1942.

The raises given were evenly distributed. So evenly, in fact, that members of the fire department and Local 128, Municipal Employes Union, found little to complain about in a conference with council's finance and salary committees preceding council's regular session.

Although the Democrats were credited with being originators of the salary increase move, Republican councilmen gave it their unanimous support. The increases go into efect Jan. 1.

Council has no control over the salaries of workers in the health department or parks division but planned to appropriate $480 for the former and $964 for the latter to allow a general increase in salaries for employes in those divisions.

The new wage schedule legislation was introduced by Harry Emmons, chairman of the salary committee and seconded by Fred Miller, chairman of the finance committee.

Emmons, who is a councilman-at-large, George C. Berg, also councilman-at-large, J. J. Kutschall, Fourth Ward; Lester Hunter, councilman-at-large; and A. L. Croak, Sixth Ward; all Democrats will be replaced in council Jan. 1.

Roy W. Vaughn, James R. Anderson and George C. Kyle will come in as councilmen-at-large while Paul G. Bush will replace Croak, and Clifford Knarr will take over the position of Third Ward councilman. All of these electees are Republicans. Michael A Mihalick, Democrat, will replace Kutschall in the Fourth Ward.

In addition to granting salary increases, council combined in one ordinance all the salary-fixing legislation of the past.

RAPS CHURCHILL

Lady Astor Criticizes Plan To Draft Unmarried Women.

LONDON — (AP) — Lady Nancy Astor criticized Prime Minister Churchill sharply for not going further in proposals to conscript womanpower in a speech in the house of commons today.

As the Labor party was reported threatened with a serious split over the bill, the American-born member of parliament asserted the prime minister "had a blind eye where women are concerned," and urged all women be treated alike. "If you don't conscript married women there will be great discontent," she said.

The prime minister announced a bill yesterday to conscript unmarried women between 20 and 30 for the uniformed services but restricting "Letah or combatant" duty to volunteers.

In his bill he also asked the house for authority to draft 3,000,000 more men for war services.

MOVIE STARLET BACK IN CITY

Diana Jeanne Schultz 'Likes' Hollywood Class But 'Loves' Woodland School.

By ESTHER SMITH

Diana Jeanne Schultz, Mansfield's young movie starlet, is back among her former classmates at Woodland school and she loves it.

"I like the studio school too," she said, referring to the Warner Bros., classroom where she spent three hours daily while making her first picture, "but I love Woodland."

That about sums up Diana Jeanne's attitude about everything Hollywood. She likes Hollywood but she loves home.

Home is 527 Crescent road, where Diana Jeanne's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Schultz and the young starlet reside, when the family is corralled under one roof for a time.

The blond, blue-eyed starlet, has just completed making her first picture, "Always In My Heart," with Kay Francis and Walter Huston and she has an autograph book that is well on its way towards being filled with such names as Sidney Blackmer, Frankie Thomas, and Una O'Connor, all of whom appear with her in the picture.

Diana Jeanne's screen name is Patty Hale but on the motion picture lot she is called Diana Jeanne as much as she is Patty. And she never wants her daddy and WASHINGTON — (AP) — The death of Col. Charles M. Cummings of the U. S. army air corps, which occurred in Lisbon, Portugal, as he was returning to Washington from special war duty, was announced by the war department.

War Correspondents to Give Lectures at Appleseed High

Richard C. Hottelet and Robert G. Nixon, ace war correspondents, wil lapepar at Johnny Appleseed Junior high school on Dec. 11, a week from tomorrow as the prime attraction of the city's Give-a-Christmas program.

Selection of Appleseed auditorium, which will seat 1,064 persons, was made today by officials of the Junior Association of Commerce and The News-Journal.

Tickets for the event, which will sell for 55 cents—50 cents plus a 5-cent federal tax—were placed on sale today in conveniently located places around town.

Since no seats will be reserved, and unusual interest has been shown in the apeparance of the two correspondents who have seen Europe's war at first hand, it will be a case of first come first served—and a word to the wise should be sufficient.

Proceeds will be used to enhance the Give-a-Christmas program to be staged by two organizations, with the Community Fund serving as a clearing house on families in need.

Hottelet, veteran United Press correspondent, was in Berlin for three years and Nixon, ace International News Service writer, covered the evacuation of Dunkirk, narrowly escaping with his own life.

Tickets are on sale at Tawse Pharmacy, Shaw's Marion avenue store, Shumaker's pharmacy, the Book Shop, The News-Journal, Bates on Fourth, Tom Woodard's Paul's Friendly store, Tucker Furniture company, Schmidt and Peat Hardware, Frank Mitsch's store, and the City News.

PLANS TO SEND DELEGATON TO STATE MEETING

City Fathers Vote Seven To Two To Ask Share of Big State Surplus.

REPUBLICANS OPPOSE

Mayor Sticks To Stand That He'll Not Seek Money But Will Watch Moves.

City council last night cleared the way for Mansfield to request a share of the $11,000,000 sales tax surplus built up by the state during the past year and the consensus was that funds obtained from that source should be used for development of the municipal airport landing field.

As the result of its action, council will send a delegation of three councilmen and City Auditor Paul L. Kelley to a state-wide meeting of municipal executives in Columbus a week from tomorrow to help plan a campaign to get shares of the surplus.

Councilmen expressed the opinion that if the city receives the sales tax fund, at least part of it should be used to develop the airport. Their sentiment toward airport improvements was further emphasized when councilmen, acting on their own initiative, appropriated $495 for leveling a dangerous hill on the landing field.

The move to send a delegation to Columbus was not received without opposition. However, the motion, made by Councilman Fred Miller, finance committee chairman, was passed by a vote of seven to two.

Republican members tried to support Mayor W. J Locke's stand that the move is "political" and favored a "hands-off" attitude. While Republican Councilman C. N. Shultz voted along with the six Democratic members, Republican Councilmen Russell D. Porch and George C. Kyle voted against the move.

If the $11,000,000 surplus would

House Committee Snags Auto Use Tax Collection.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The house appropriations committee threw a monkey wrench today into the elaborate machinery proposed by the treasury department for collection of the new $5 annual automobile use tax.

If the house permits the monkey wrench to stay there, it will make the autotax inoperative.

The committee withheld the $4,502,554 the treasury said the Bureau of Internal Revenue required to collect an estimated $160,000,000 in taxes with the comment it was "not satisfied with the manner and cost of collection proposed. . . ."

The lak taxing the nation's 32,000,000 motor vehicles provided that $2,09, taxes be collected Feb. 1, 1942 for the five months of the 1942 fiscal year and that the entire $5 tax be collected July 1, 1942 for the fiscal year of 1943. Penalties were provided for non-payment.

URGES 2-LANE TRAFFIC ON 42

Prosecutor Sugests Program To Cut Death Toll; Also Asks Traffic Lights.

Taking steps to reduce the traffic hazard on the "Bloody Six Miles" of U. S. Route 42 northeast of Mansfield and at dangerous intersections in the county, Prosecutor Harold Lutz today recommended that the state highway department reduce that section of Route 42 to a two-lane route and install four traffic lights at major rural intersections.

The prosecutor said an extensive investigation of traffic conditions since he took office nearly a year ago convinced him that the dangers on Route 42 from Mansfield to the Ashland county line won't be eliminated until an orange line is painted in the middle of the highway to limit the traffic to two lanes. It is a three-lane route now.

In a letter to the traffic superintendent of the state highway department, Lutz also urged the installation of lights at Bahl avenue and U. S. Route 30 in East Mansfield, Route 30-S and the Shelby-Ontario road in Ontario, at the Bowman road and State Route 96 north of Mansfield, and on State Route 545 in Olivesburg.

The light at Bowman road and Route 96 should be a flisher signal which would be seen from all four approaches to the intersection, Lutz said.

The prosecutor said there also should be a light on route 42 in Lexington, but he added that he had no jurisdiction to recommend one there because the question must be decided by village coun-

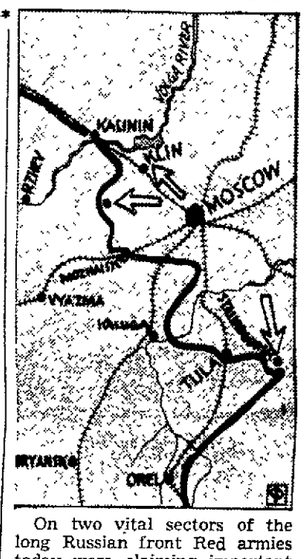
NEW U. S. TANK DUE NEXT MONTH

First of Rivetless Machines to Be Built In Ohio.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— After next August, the United States will be producing only rivetless tanks, three-fourths of them welded and the rest of cast steel.

The first of the new 30-ton medium combat tanks, known as the M-4, will be produced at the Lima Locomotive works, "sometime in January," said Major D. J. Crawford of the ordnance division of tanks and combat vehicles. It will have a cast steel hull and will go to England, as the Lima plant has only British tank orders.

The M-4 will replace the M-3, Major Crawford told a meeting of tank and armor plate producers, and the 5,000 to 6,000 M-3 models now on order for Britain and the United States will be completed by next August.



On two vital sectors of the long Russian front Red armies today were claiming important successes against the Germans. In the upper one of these two Central Press maps is shown the area where the Reds say they have thrust Hitler's armies back from Rostov in the direction of Mariupol. Arrows indicate the swinging movement by which the Stalin troops hope to encircle Axis forces. DIES IN BLAST

Friend of Roosevelts Killed In Explosion.

NEW YORK —(INS)— Vesta Kelling, 33-year-old woman feature writer, said to be a personal friend of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, was killed today in a gas explosion that rocked her East Side Manhattan apartment.

Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy declared the death of Miss Kelling was accidental. He said it was obvious that a pot of water in which she was cooking two eggs had boiled over as she answered a long distance telephone call.

Police reported that the body of Miss Kelling, was found half-clad on the floor halfway between the kitchen and her living room. Five gas jets were on in the kitchen.

Soviets Crowd Foe In Rostov, Moscow Areas

Advance 12 to 24 Miles In Blizzard Along Capital Front; Hitler Sends Commander-In-Chief to Ukraine In Attempt to Halt Rout.

(By Associated Press)

Russia's armies were reported to have hurled the Germans back 12 to 24 miles on the blizzard-swept Moscow front today, while in the Ukraine the Russians declared that "the panic-stricken enemy" was still in headlong flight from Rostov-on-Don.

Quoting latest advices from Moscow, the British radio said the Russians had sent the panzer forces of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian spinning in reverse.

A communique from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters claimed fresh gains in violent tank and infantry battles before Moscow, but the Russians said the Germans had been thrown back in two key sectors and generally painted a brightening picture of the two-month-old struggle for the capital.

In the Ukraine, Soviet dispatches said Red armies counter-marching back through the Donets river industrial basin were finding the frozen bodies of Germans wrapped in flimsy blankets, huddled in roadside ditches, and that to save themselves from the bitter cold the Nazis were fighting with suicidal fury to hold villages where they could find warmth and shelter.

A London broadcast said Hitler had rushed Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the entire German army, to the Ukraine in an attempt to "stop the rout at all cost."

German armored reinforcements were reported hurrying along the Mariupol road to combat the Russians' sweeping counter-offensive, which so far appeared to have hurled the Germans back more than 75 miles from their farthest eastward thrust to the Novocherkassk region, 35 miles beyond Rostov. According to Soviet reports, the Germans are falling back somewhere between Taganrog, 40 miles west of Rostov, and Mariupol.

Mariupol is 100 miles west of Rostov.

Soviet front-line dispatches said the battered German forces under Field Marshal Ewald von Kleist had lost more than 21,000 men killed and wounded in the running battle along the shores of the Sea of Azov.

On the winter-bound central front, where the Germans asserted their troops were within sight of Moscow's towers, a bulletin from Hitler's headquarters said tank-led Nazi infantry supported by dive-bombers cut fresh swaths through Soviet defense lines. It gave no details.

By contrast, the Russians said

DENY TOKYO HAS FDR'S REQUEST

Japs Say Nomura Has Not Yet Forwarded Word; Attacks on U. S. Sharpen.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK —(INS)— "General Heidiki Tojo, Japan's premier is going to make an important announcement early next week, in which he will state the future policy of his government," the BBC, quoting Tokio advices, stated in a broadcast heard in New York by the NBC listening post.

(By United Press)

TOKYO — The government information board said today that Japan has not been informed officially of President Roosevelt's request for an explanation of Japanese military concentrations in French Indo-China.

Official disavowal that Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese ambassador to Washington, had yet informed Tokyo of the president's request concided with intensification of Japanese press criticism of the United Press.

Hope waned that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, would bow before Japanese expansionist aims. Newspapers said that success or failure of negotiations at Washington depended on the American attitude.

They charged with increased bitterness that the United States was leading a drive for complete encirclement of Japan.

"Allied powers blind maneuvers now turned into offensive against Japan by unjustified pressure on Thailand," headlined the newspaper Asahi over an editorial which said:

"Although Roosevelt, Hull and British Ambassador Halifax have expressed hope of a peaceful settlement with Japan, they are at the same time concentrating on challenging maneuvers against Japan. We can not understand such an attitude. Britain and the United States will be responsible for any worsening of the situation."

TALK IT OVER

Rail Workers Discuss Accord That Brings Pay Raise.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Around switch shanty stoves and the water coolers of general offices, the nation's railroad workers found plenty to talk about today after a wage-raising agreement ended the threat of a general strike against the carriers.

President Roosevelt announced the terms late yesterday. The peace pact was worked out with the help of a presidentially appointed board which brought the managements and brotherhoods together after a sleepless weekend of conferences.

The 900,000 members of the 14 non-operating unions, — clerks, telegraphers, roundhouse employes and the like—will receive 80 cents more a day.

The 350,000 members of the five operating brotherhoods—the men who actually run the trains—won increases of 76 cents a day.

Aspiring Young Mansfield Author Sees $275 Fading as U. S. Opens Racket Probe

Accuse Publishing Firm of Mulcting Funds From Writers.

Bennie Contra, 91 West Sixth street, aspiring young author, saw $275 of his savings slowly fading away today but he had some satisfaction in knowing that something is being done about it.

Contra was revealed today as one in a parade of hundreds of writers who were allegedly victimized by a New York publishing firm to a total of nearly $500,000.

The Mansfield youth's name was included in a dispatch from New York along with others who have been making payments to Fortuny Publishers, Inc., to have their books published but allegedly receive nothing in return.

Carlo M. Flumiani, president of the publishing company, is on trial in federal court charged with operating a "vanity" publishing racket in violation of the mail fraud laws.

The prosecution claims hundreds were mulcted of nearly half a million dollars.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Rudolph Halley told Judge Simon H. Pifkin and the jury that Flumiani through his publishing concern would, through misrepresentation, induce hopeful writers to finance publication of their manuscripts in the hope of receiving substantial royalties and a start toward fame. The volume would seldom be published but continued monthly payments were solicited, it was charged.

URGES 2-LANE TRAFFIC ON 42

cil and the state highway department.

Explaining his suggestion for a two-lane limitation on route 42 northeast of the city, Lutz said "accidents will continue to occur there as long as two drivers going in opposite directions try to pass other cars in the middle of the road at the same time."

He said investigations of recent fatal mishaps on "Bloody Six" showed that a number of them resulted from drivers taking chances on passing and then meeting others with the same idea.

"Two-lane markers will slow down traffic on the highway, but a line in the middle of the road will give authorities something to base a charge on when a driver goes over the line and collides with an on-coming car," Lutz asserted.

Eight of the county's 26 traffic fatalities since the first of the year have occurred on the wide section of route 42 from Lincoln Heights to the county line.

"No official can make good drivers out of poor ones and eliminate recklessness, but we can regulate traffic better and avoid some of the hazards," the prosecutor said.

Meanwhile, he continued his investigation today of the accident Sunday afternoon three miles northeast of the city where two Ashland youths were fatally injured.

Robert Ray Emperio, 18, Ashland, driver of the car in which the two youths were riding, was taken back to General hospital today for further treatment for injuries he received in the crash. Emperio was to have appeared in municipal court today on a charge of unsafe operation filed by Maynard G. Sams, 22, Mansfield driver of the other car involved in the crash.

Two Springfield township sisters, Glenna Riddle, 11, and Pauline, 7, were injured late yesterday in Ontario when they were struck by a car as they walked along U. S route 30-S. Both were in General hospital today, Glenna suffering with a fractured wrist and face injuries and Pauline with a fractured right hip. Albert D. Seyfors, of Crestline, driver of the car, was charged by state highway patrolmen with having faulty brakes on his car.

In another accident yesterday on route 30 near Charles Mill lake, John J. Rotter, Newcastle, Ind., escaped with scratches when his car skidded on the wet pavement and rolled end-over-end down a 20-foot embankment.

Mansfield Movie Starlet Back In School Here

It's a big jump from the private school maintained on the Warner Brothers' lot for the children of that motion picture industry to Woodland school in Mansfield but Diana Jeanne Schultz, or Patty Hale, as the local starlet will be known in pictures, made it this week. Diana Jeanne returned to her former classmates in Woodland school's second grade to remain until after the holidays when she expects to return to Hollywood. She was a pupil at Woodland until last spring. The blue-eyed young miss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Schultz, 527 Crescent road, was snapped by The News-Journal photographer as she looked up from her lessons at Woodland school in the picture shown here at the top. The picture below, taken by Longworth at Warner Bros., shows the starlet in a "still" used for exploitation purposes.

mother to call her anything but Diana Jeanne.

In her first picture she is known as "Booley," the mischievous daughter of the housekeeper of Kay Francis. "Booley," is a tattle-tale and a minx of the first order and the part calls for Diana Jennte to eat practically everything in sight.

"I have to eat whipped cream, candy, cookies and celery," said Diana Jeanne, her eyes sparkling at the memory. "But," she added, "I really didn't like them very much."

The thing she really did get a "kick" out of was "climbing all over the furniture on the set. "I don't get to climb over furniture at home," pouted the six-year-old actress.

"Everybody was lovely to work with in the picture," said Diana Jeanne, when talking about the players with whom she appeared. She didn't claim any favorites but showed affection for all of them.

"Miss Francis has a mother role and Gloria Warren and Frankie Thomas are her children," the starlet said. She further explained that "Miss Francis makes a living for the rest of the family in the picture because she is divorced from her husband." Walter Hus ton plays the husband.

RUSSIANS HURL GERMANS BACK ON TWO FRONTS

Advance 12 to 24 Miles Before Moscow Nazis Continue Flight In Ukraine.

Gen. Gregory K. Zhukov's armies recaptured three villages in the critical Mozhaisk sector, 57 miles west of Moscow, and drove the Germans out of several settlements in the Stalinogorosk sector, 120 miles southeast of the capital.

"The enemy is retreating southward under the pressure of our cavalry and tanks," said the newspaper Pravda, referring to the Stalinogorosk action.

Despite the bitter cold and snow, a German spokesman declared that "at no point along the front have we gone into winter quarters."

In the north, around long-beleaguered Leningrad, the Russians said 1,000 Germans had been killed in two days of battle in which Soviet troops captured eight tanks and 14 field guns.

On the North African front, British imperial headquarters said the desert conflict continued to rage over a wide area but that the tempo of battle had decreased "for the time being."

Acknowledging that Italian troops hold Bardia, Mediterranean port 10 miles west of the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, the British declared they still held Ed Duda at the southeast terminal of the 10-mile corridor to Tobruk while Axis forces occupied nearby Rezegh and Bir El Hamed.

With the 16-day-old British offensive at least momentarily stalled by the fury of German counter-attacks, both sides were reported sparring for position and reorganizing their battle-scarred forces for a new major test of strength.

Hitler's high command summed up the desert struggle in a single sentence:

"In North Africa, British forces encircled southeast of Tobruk—the bulk of a New Zealand division—were partly destroyed and partly captured."

Premier Mussolini's high command reported sharp fighting continued despite bad weather and credited Italian forces with destroying 17 British tanks, five armored cars and 20 trucks around Sidi Omar.

A London broadcast said it had been discovered that at least half the tanks of the Italian Ariete ("Battering Ram") division were manned by Germans.

A British spokesman said today's lull in the campaign followed "a ding-dong battle with attack and counter-attack by both sides" yesterday in the bloody Rezegh area.

Rome announced uncovering a vast revolutionary plot which was said to have included a pre-war attempt on the life of Premier Mussolini and numerous cases of sabotage.

The plot was disclosed to the public when 60 persons, including a number of students, were placed on trial at Trieste on charges of anti-Italian offenses for which the penalty might be death. The charges included plotting a revolt in northeast Italy.

Eleven members of the band of plotters, whom the Italians said were incited by foreign influences, were reported officially still at large—presumably abroad.

Killbuck Resident Fatally Hurt In Collision.

The truck driver, a Wooster man, Wayne county authorities said, was released after questioning by Coroner L. A. Adair.

Carter's death was the 19th in Wayne county highways this year. Last year at the same time 17 persons had been killed in traffic.

Surviving Carter are his widow, Ellen; two sons, Charles and James; a daughter, Norma Jean; and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Carter; three sisters and four brothers, all of Killbuck.

The body was taken to the Elliott funeral home in Millersburg where services will be held Friday at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Killbuck cemetery.

funds, the bill also carried $87,179,000 for purposes indirectly related to defense, chiefly new or augmented power projects; $37,500,000 for foreign war relief and foreign property control and $8,711,333 to carry out non-defense activities authorized in several new laws.

The army's share of the total included funds to boost its enlisted strength to 1,840,934, an increase of 277,026 men, and for 27,905 more commissioned officers and 5,765 additional warrant officers.

The committee recommended expenditure of $388,000,000 for expansion of facilities for the manufacture of tanks, guns and other ordnance after Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, testified that "it is now necessary that all production rates be more than doubled and that the added capacity be brought in as soon as possible."

The need for a heavier anti-aircraft gun—a 4.7-inch caliber weapon designed for use against altitude bombers—was cited by Patterson as one item necessitating new productive facilities.

Other large items for the army included $408,000,000 to give the air corps, a larger reserve of spare parts for all its planes now under contract; $92,000,000 for miscellaneous construction for the air corps; $10,407,0000 for urgently needed facilities for the ground forces; $60,354,000 to pay the $10 monthly bonus voted by congress for all army enlisted men with one year's service and $2,920,000 to pay the premiums on $10,000 life insurance policies for air corps flying cadets.

A grand total of $37,820,000 was provided for military post construction and land acquisition and the committee said it included funds for 11 new army air fields, four of them in unspecified outlying possessions, and for 14 "skeletonized" airfields in preparation for the projected expansion of the air forces.

COUNCIL TURNS DOWN RAILROAD PURCHASE OFFER

Bucyrus City Fathers Decide To Retain Property Holdings.

BUCYRUS—City council Tuesday night, in accepting a report of a special commitee appointed to consider an offer of $11,000 in exchange for a clear title to Bucyrus New York Central shops and property, refused the company's offer, made six months ago.

Councilman Harry Carle, in submitting the committee's decision, presented a written report explaining terms of the original agreement between the city and the railroad company, which leaves the way clear to the city to take one of three steps in the future.

The first course of action open to the city is to reconsider and accept the offer of $11,000 which would leave the company free to remove or dispose of the property as it may choose. The second is for the city to take no affirmative action as long as the railroad company continues to employ its present corps of employes and the third course is to declare a forefeiture of the property as provided in the original deed and take possession of the lands, buildings and machinery.

"We have given consideration to many phases of the situation the rights and general welfare of the city and of the railroad employes and acted for the best interests of all concerned," the report stated.

"We believe that the lands, buildings and machinery are more valuable today than they were in 1931 when the courts estimated their value as not less than two million dollars," the report sets forth.

Members of the special committee who have had the question under consideration since the proposal was given to council in June were Harry Carle, E. H. Carter and Carl Light.

Other council action included the dedication of grounds for a public alley and authorization of the lease of a city lot for public parking purposes.

Council authorized the city solicitor to draw up the necessary legislation for the lease of the Park House lot on North Walnut street for a public parking lot. The grounds will be leased for 30 day periods at a rate of $10 per month.

In line with similar action governing the police department, council passed legislation permitting members of the fire department to extend their services outside of the municipality. The action was taken to provide members of both departments protection under their pension set-up.

JANITORS SEEK WAGE INCREASE

Cite Hike In Cost of Living In Petition To Galion School Board.

GALION—Attention was called to the increase in the cost of living when custodians in the Galion schools petitioned the board of education for salary boosts.

The letter, signed by six janitors, asked that the increase be not less than 15 or 20 per cent, because of "the growing cost of food stuff and clothing, together with the increase in rents."

Board members, with Louise John presiding in the absence of Dr. P. A. Murr, spent some time discussing the possibility of such an increase, and decided to take the matter under advisement.

The board took out fire and theft insurance on typewriters and visual education equipment in the schools, and liability insurance on vehicles transporting children from the Children's home.

Some consideration was given the problem of establishing hot lunches at West school for children who remain during the noon hour; (mostly rural pupils) but no action was taken. It was explained that some articles of food could be secured from the Surplus Commodities department and thus provide lunches free of charge to underprivileged children.

A report of finances by the clerk, showed a balance on Dec. 1 of $18,739, from which the Dec. 15 payroll of $8,200 is to be deducted, besides bills for the month amounting to $4,000, leaving a balance for Jan. 1 of some $6,539. It was stated that the bond and interest payment is now down to $7,493.11.

The board granted permission to the Marion schools to play both basketball games on the Galion junior high gym floor. The rate for the use of the floor for the one game when Marion will be host to the local team, was placed at $15.

The board also received a report of necessary repairs at the North school building, following an inspection of the building. Some time was spent by the board in discussing plans to have this work done.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1941.

The Nazis now have a slogan: "Moscow by Christmas"—but it's unlikely that Hitler in Santa Claus disguise would fool anybody.

Nearly as many Americans as Britons have been killed since the war started—but over here it is done with automobiles.

"Inflation is always followed by deflation," says Secretary Morgenthau—which modernizes the older "What goes up must come down."

Railroad Mediation Successful

HOWEVER little the likelihood was at any time that there would be a general railroad strike in the United States, news of an agreement being reached between railroad companies and their employes is received with a sigh of relief.

The matter of wage increases for operating and non-operating employes was the main point of controversy during long-drawn-out negotiation processes, with annual vacations also playing an important role.

First demand of employes for wage increases which, it was contended by the companies, would raise annual operating costs $900,000,000, was brought down to about $270,000,000 in the first mediation board report, but this was refused by both the operating and non-operating employes. Threat of a strike, with the date fixed at next Sunday, resulted in President Roosevelt sending the matter back to the mediators for further consideration, and points of disagreement were cleared yesterday.

Value of special machinery set up by the federal government a number of years ago for avoidance of railway strikes has again been demonstrated and confirms belief that ways can be found to settle employe-employer differences in other lines of employment without resort to the strike weapon.

Congress is now making serious approach to the task of formulating a measure intended to prevent further strikes in defense industries but it would seem that the time should not be far distant when employe-employer relations will have advanced to the point of making strikes unnecessary in normal times as well as in defense or war emergencies.

Not only American railroads and their employes have a big job to do, but employers and employes in every line of productive work are being called upon to exert every ounce of energy in the present great task of national defense and aid to the nations which are now a part of this defense. Until military defeat of the Axis powers has been accomplished there can be no justification for individual or group action that retards the national defense program in even a small way.

Checks Reward Systematic Savers

ALMOST a quarter of a million dollars was placed in the hands of about 5,000 Mansfielders this week, through the Christmas savings checks distributed by Mansfield banks.

This represents a consistent saving policy carried along, week after week, through the past year—for the special purpose of assuring a little extra money for Christmas shopping, or to meet some anticipated or unexpected need.

While Christmas savings funds have paid no interest for the past several years this plan for systematic saving has continued popular, probably because of the satisfaction resulting from assurance of receiving a substantial check early in December, in exchange for small weekly deposits through the year.

Saving money isn't easy for a majority of people, who find many lures for pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters—but the habit of thrift, as it is encouraged by Christmas savings accounts and other methods of putting aside a part of each week's earnings for later use, is well worth cultivating even in these uncertain times.

High Cost of High Speed

SOME motorists who are not impressed by the argument that high speed may cost them their lives may give more serious consideration to the claim that many dollars can be saved by driving at moderate speed.

It costs one dollar more per hour for gasoline, oil, tires, and maintenance to drive a car at 50 miles an hour than to operate the machine at 35 miles an hour, C. R. Strouse, director of the automobile schools, International Correspondence Schools, cautions in advocating a reduction of highway speed in the interest of national defense.

Keeping the speed indicator on 50 means that in 1,000 miles the average motor car uses 10 more gallons of gas, 1½ quarts of oil, $3 more depreciation of rubber. And in addition, the maintenance bill increases $3.30, it has been estimated by Mr. Strouse.

"Is it worth a dollar more an hour to you to drive your car at the speed limit?" Mr. Strouse asks. A slower speed brings on less fatigue and is much safer, he said, and the driver does his part in conserving such valuable defense materials as gasoline, oil, etc.

By following the simple expedient of keeping the car's speed to 35 miles an hour, it is possible to cut the total operating costs each 1,000 miles from approximately $26.50 to $17.90. Thus, one saves $8.60 and profits in many other respects, the school authority pointed out.

Air Service To the Congo

REGULAR air service will soon be established between Florida and the Belgian Congo and beyond. Preliminary flights have been made.

There will be bi-weekly passenger and mail flights. On the trip from Africa to the United States emphasis will be on the return of pilots who have flown American-made airplanes to the British and their allies by way of Africa. Established air connections already exist between Leopoldville and the Near East.

Here is a service of vital importance in the immediate future. Later on, when the democracies have won the war and world peace has been restored, tourists and trade should make excellent use of it.

Walter Lippmann thinks that common sense is the only thing that will save mankind—but surely there must be some other way.

Joe Stalin may sometimes wonder how a country happened to have enough money to loan him a billion dollars.

"Poets must live," says a London poet—but not necessarily by writing poetry.

Listen World!

Don't Mumble!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'VE BEEN LISTENING to young Dorothy Kilgallen doing her new broadcast. P'raps you know Dorothy—we like to talk about her. She's a kid who grew up regular, taking all the hard knocks and asking no favors, even though she's Big Time Jimmy Kilgallen's daughter. Gone from a cub reporter's assignment right through the repertoire to her own night-spot column—and now is swinging a radio stunt. Yet, all the time, she's kept herself as simple and friendly as the first daffodil. Great little gal!

Sitting there, listening to her fresh and forthright young voice batting it in, over the ether, I thought how rare such voices are . . . definite, straight-from-the-shoulder voices. Nothing blurry . . . nothing mumbling or fumbling. Dorothy has something to say and she says it. She gives you herself and her news—AS IS. Doesn't try to hide or fake anything. What a happier, healthier world we'd have, if we all could be like that!

DON'T MUMBLE! Know what you want to say, realize the limits of what you can say, then say it, simply, clearly, sincerely. I suspect that's one of the deepest laws of life.

DON'T MUMBLE! Don't mumble with your lips or your mind or your heart. There's a reason why. You've a job to do in this world . . . you've a piece of goods to sell. That "piece of goods" is your most valuable possession. It is YOUR SELF.

Your Self is a very complicated affair. It has been ages in building. Millions of men and women have had a hand in its making. Out of their bodies and minds and spirits they have given you part of THEIR SELVES—part of whatever was wise and strong, fine, brave, beautiful, loyal and reliable in THEIR SELVES. So, eventually, you came into this world with the body they helped to mold, the spirit they helped to shape.

THEY LEFT YOU THE BEST THEY HAD. NOW IT IS YOUR JOB—YOUR MOST IMPORTANT JOB—TO HAND THAT BEST ON . . . DISTINCT . . . UNBLURRED.

DON'T MUMBLE! The world needs what you have to hand on. These are troubled times . . . busy, uncertain, bewildered times. Don't add to that uncertainty and bewilderment by your own mumbling. Others need your confidence, your cheerfulness. Don't cheat them!

DON'T MUMBLE! Don't try to give an impression which is beyond your power to fulfill. Don't attempt to give something you lack. If you're not an Encyclopedia Britannica, don't attempt to act like one. If you're not Diogenes, don't rent a barrel.

Be Your Self—your honest, unaffected Self. Give what you are capable of giving, no more, no less. For this is the only giving that counts . . . the only giving that is necessary. Anything else is a snare and a delusion—and weary, discouraged, baffled human beings will hate you for handing them a phoney.

DON'T MUMBLE! Say what you have to say—and then shut up. Any one will be excused for lack of wisdom, provided you give sympathy and loyalty in its place. But nobody forgives a Hypocrite or a Mumbler who tries to put on a hollow act.

DON'T MUMBLE! Golly—Elsie—how I wish you could always follow your own swell advice!

As Others See It

Cause and Effect.

Psychologist Wiggam reports that women are more annoyed than men by things that go wrong "in their surroundings." Probably because the women have fewer surroundings to start with.—Kansas City Star.

Propaganda Material.

The Charles West story alone, granting that the ex-government attache's performance was honorable, could be more useful to Hitler's propagandists than anything Goebbels could invent. — Akron Beacon-Journal.

Words of the Wise

"Keep aloof from sadness," says an Icelandic writer, "for sadness is a sickness of the soul." Life has, indeed, many ills, but the mind that views every object in its most cheering aspect, and every doubtful dispensation as replete with latent good, bears within itself a powerful and perpetual antidote. The gloomy soul aggravates misfortune, while a cheerful smile often dispels those mists that portend a storm.—Mrs. Sigourney.

Health And Diet

Health Questions Answered Here.

—By DR. CLENDENING

J. C., Philadelphia, Pa.:—"What is the exact effect of removal of one kidney? Must one follow a certain diet? Is the length of the life shortened? And is the person susceptible to a general run-down condition?"

Answer: There are thousands of cases on record where a person has had one kidney removed and lived a long time afterwards, in fact lived out a full life expectancy without any deviation from the general run of good health. It is not necessary to go on a special diet.

Office Staff, Brookfield, Mo.:—"We understand that a girl in a city not far from here was in an automobile accident and is now in the hospital in that town. She was wearing nylon hose at the time of the accident and it is said that she developed a cancer on her injured leg, supposedly resultant from the nylon fabric. Please either banish our hesitancy about wearing nylon or tell us 'the worst.'"

Answer: I am glad to do my bit. Banish fear of nylon stockings. They have nothing to do with cancer. There was plenty of cancer long before there was nylon.

H. D. R.:—"Which foods should be eliminated for high blood pressure? Should coca-cola and cigars be eliminated?"

Answer: The treatment of high blood pressure by diet is not by any means entirely successful. The most approved idea is to eat the alkaline foods and avoid acid-forming foods. This means in general to avoid meats and to emphasize vegetables and fruits. Coca-Cola has no effect on blood pressure. Cigars raise blood pressure.

W. W.:—"I have small boils and pimples on the back of my neck and my barber says they are due to ingrowing hair. What can be done about ingrowing hair?"

Answer: The hairs on your neck will not be ingrowing if you do not shave them. Let them grow long, wash the neck every morning with soap and water and apply ammoniated mercury ointment to the pimples every evening.

Timely Editorial

When the Earth Shakes.

Of the many powerful and terrifying weapons available to nature, none is more awesome or destructive than the earthquake. It can level cities and destroy man's work of centuries in a few minutes of time. It can change the shape of a coastline plunge vast areas beneath the waters or create new land.

The most recent earthquake fortunately seems to have been in some submerged portion of the earth where it would do the least damage. Had it involved occupied territory the destruction and loss of life would have been great, due to its extreme violence.

The earth is growing old, and is not subject to the great upheavals and readjustments which once shook it to its very foundations. Occasionally, however, a fault has to be corrected and there are tremors and disturbances which prove quite trying to the inhabitants.—Ohio State Journal.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Dies Uncovers Startling Network Of Propaganda In United States

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Martin Dies, the unpredictable congressman from Texas, has not been talking much of late, but he has had a corps of investigators doing a lot of digging. And the result promises to be one of the most important contributions the Dies committee has made so far to the expose of un-American activities.

Dies has seized the records of several German-American agencies, also Nazi checks coming from South America, together with some of the records of Japanese propagandists. Piecing all this together, he has a sensational and apparently accurate picture of the tremendous ramification of Nazi propaganda in this country.

One of the most significant phases is the manner in which this Nazi machine is linked through its members to certain American organizations such as the Knights of Camellia, the Ku Klux Klan, the Silver Shirts and so on.

Central agency for this Nazi propaganda, according to the Dies record, is the Kyffhaeuserbund which operates in North and South America. It co-operates with the Kriegerbund, which operates all over the world.

Dies has found that money from North and South America pours into Kyffhaeuserbund coffers, and he has a list of the leading contributors. He also has a lot of the secret membership cards, some of which state that the bearer is qualified to do confidential work on behalf of the Kyffhaeserbund.

Tracing the membership list of the Kyffhaeuserbund, Dies has found that many of its members also are members of the Silver Shirts, the Klan, and local chapters of the America First Committee. The interlocking membership of these organizations, his investigators have found to be almost unbelievable.

Detroit Strongest.

ONE interesting Dies discovery is that the largest number of contributions to these organizations comes from Detroit; second, Chicago, a noted isolationist center; third, New York.

Dies has also found that some Italian schools tie in with these organizations, and among other things use text books from Italy which glorify Mussolini.

However, the most significant thing is the creed of these German organizations — to spread confusion, distrust and suspicion. In fact, the fundamental program of the bunds is to keep the United States as disunited as possible.

Dies has found a great similarity between the instructions given these agents and the program followed by the agitators who threw the Sudetenland into chaos before Hitler marched into Czechoslovakia. Furthermore, he has found that when a propaganda policy is laid down by the central Nazi organizations, it is taken up immediately by the American Fascist organizations. In fact the mailing list of the Kyffhaeuserbund is identical with the mailing list of Silver Shirt Leader William D. Pelley.

Dies will publish his amazing findings in the near future.

U. S. Counter-Propaganda.

TWO of the newest agencies of the U. S. government are the cause of most American-born worry to German propaganda officials. These are the Rockefeller Office (Inter-American Affairs), and the Donovan Office (Co-ordinator of Information).

The speed with which these two agencies get out news bulletins and official expressions of opinion, for short wave broadcast to the entire world (Rockefeller sends only to Latin America, Donovan to all other countries), has the Nazis sweating.

Best the Nazis can do is to retaliate with ridicule. The FCC monitoring system recently caught this language being broadcast shortwave from Berlin:

"Who is this Colonel Donovan?"

"He is the man who made a mess of things in the Balkans and lost his brief case."

"What does his bureau consist of?"

The answer is a crack at the new location of the Donovan office, near the monkey and guinea pig cages of the National Institute of Health: "Fifty professors, 20 monkeys, 10 goats, 12 guinea pigs, a sheep, and a staff of Jewish scribblers."

Texas Rangers.

TEXAS' famed rangers have performed many unusual services in their long colorful career, but none stranger than the one they are now tackling in the interest of national defense.

A detail of fifteen crack rangers has been borrowed by the government to help keep order at the Trinidad island base loaned the United States by Britain as part of the deal for 50 over-age destroyers.

Under construction in the jungles of the West Indies island is a $51,000,000 naval and air base. The terms of the agreement with Britain require the employment of native labor for the manual work and because of the high wages paid by the two U. S. construction firms there has been considerable trouble among the natives competing for jobs. On several occasions there have been riots which the war-reduced constabulary could not handle.

Because of Texas rangers' experience, Trinidad authorities decided to ask the state to lend a group to help the Trinidad constabulary maintain order. So far the rangers have been effective in preventing brawls among the natives, but if serious trouble should break out again, U. S. authorities are prepared to ask Britain for a change in the construction agreement to permit the importation of a certain percentage of American workers.

H. V. Uniontown, Pa.—It was in Columbus, Ohio, in November, 1921, that John L. Lewis told the United Mine Workers convention: "Gentlemen, the United Mine Workers, comprising less than one-half of one per cent of the total population of the United States, could not, if it so desired, defeat the government of the United States in a contest, and neither do I as a citizen, as a man, as a member of our union, desire to defeat the government of the United States..."

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Though he had a bad cold, Emil Ludwig greeted his interviewers with good humor on his visit to New York. The biographer of Napoleon, Bismarck, Roosevelt and the Nile was enthusiastic about his newest biography, "The German People," which he explained as a two-way biography.

"I am almost in the position of a man writing of his divorced wife," Emil Ludwig said. "She is beautiful, but there are terrible things about her. With their culture, science, and genius the German people are great. But their saber-rattling and grandiose schemes for world conquest make them unbearable.

"In a way, you can describe Germany as one of your big double-decker buses that run up and down Fifth avenue. . . . Upstairs are the Wagners, Beethovens and the giants of Germany's culture—but they have no control over the bus-driver, who sits below. My book has the study and observations of 30 years—but it required only about three months to write it."

EMIL LUDWIG long ago forswore the Nazis and sought more tranquil surroundings. For awhile he became a citizen of Switzerland, but when Europe began to crack up, he came to the United States, applied for citizenship, and is, he says, more completely satisfied than he has ever been. He lives in Santa Barbara, Calif., and lectures at the State college there. He lectures once a week on European civilization and culture.

His English is not as good as it will one day be, and some of the boys sometimes have difficulty in understanding him, he says, but he is proud of one bouquet tossed his way by a student with a sense of humor. "Professor Ludwig," the student said, "your German is practically perfect."

"When I received my first papers, I was very excited," Ludwig confessed. "I was told that I would have to enter from the Mexico side. So I got into my car and drove from Santa Barbara to a point close to the Mexican border. I crossed the border and then 'immigrated from Mexico.'

"The official who fixed my papers wrote down that I came into this country from Mexico 'on foot,' which makes me out a tramp. That is marvelous. It is great to be a tramp in the United States. It is great to get those first papers, a great thrill. When I am a full-fledged American citizen, I will be very happy."

THE professor spent a lot of time in Washington in 1936 gathering material for his biography of Roosevelt. While there he talked with almost everyone in Washington. . . . "Then," he said, "I made a little prophecy, in print. . . . I wrote, in 1936, that of all the people I had talked to, next to the president, Hopkins and Wallace had the greatest future. Today Mr. Hopkins is the president's right hand man, and Mr. Wallace is the vice-president. That makes me a very good prophet. But I will not push my luck. I will stand on my record."

A Farmer's Diary

Big Names

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

FARM LIFE has many phases of entertainment—some most surprising. Very recently I passed a farm home where the 15-year-old high school boy was going toward the barn with a remnant of sandwich in his hand. It had been a big sandwich—but not too big for a hungry boy after school. He tried to whistle as he moved slowly along the path, but his mouth was too full and he only made a peculiar sound.

A long-necked, thin, old black horse craned his graying head over the gate and whinnered. The lad gave him the remainder of his crust and then a small red apple, from his pocket. "Poor honest Abe," he said, "You want an apple, don't you, Abe?" and as the horse lipped the apple from his palm he stroked its bony nose.

"Is that your horse?" I asked as I came up.

"No sir—but I pretend he is," he admitted, shyly. "I call him Abraham Lincoln because he's so tall and rawboned and awkward." Then, seeing I was interested, he added, "Come on into the barn. That's Stonewall Jackson, there"—he pointed to a shrewd, dark wiry bay. "This'n's General Lee"—a strongly built light gray, with kindly modest eyes—"and that'n's George B. McClellan," and there I saw a dark, unruly, tricky face that peered at me distrustfully. "We've been studying the Civil war," went on the boy, "and I thought it was sort o' interesting to find the characteristics of those generals in our four horses. Besides, it's better to be in company like that, than to be just feedin' and waterin' horses. Did you ever notice, yourself, how much some folks look like animals?"

"Sh—" I laughed. "I know a very dignified lady who looks like a horse. I know a man who resembles a Berkshire pig—and one of my good friends always reminds me of a bull dog—though I've never told him. What about the cows over in the pasture—do you name them, too?"

"My sister does. She likes literature, see—and in those stalls you'll find Louisa May Alcott, Florence Nightingale, Mary Lyon and Frances Willard. Those three little heifers that just come in—they're Edna Ferber, Eleanor Roosevelt and Dorothy Thompson!"

The Walls Came Tumbling + +

By Joseph McCord
(Copyright, 1941.)

CHAPTER VII

Charles Lennon was 19, a frail but cheerful polio victim with an almost useless left leg. Dr. Silverthorne had fitted him with a brace and he was able to move about slowly with the aid of a cane. He had a strong mechanical bent and was clever with his hands, spending much of his time tinkering at a work bench his older brother made for him. Wige was exceedingly fond of his brother and did his best to keep the boy supplied with simple materials and tools to while away what otherwise must have been tedious hours. When he came in this evening, Charlie's first question had been:

"My mechanics magazine is out today, did you remember?"

"Why, sure I did, Chuck." Wige's usually sober face lighted with a smile. "But darned if I didn't leave it in the car! I'll get it right after supper. Mother says it's ready. Okay?"

"Sure."

"What's this about a new factory coming to town?" Amanda Lennon wanted to know immediately after asking a blessing with an almost plaintive air. "If I heard it from one person uptown I did from half a dozen."

"I don't know much about it yet, Mother," Wige admitted, holding out his plate for a helping of fried eggs. "It's an airplane company, the Lawhead Corporation. They're supposed to have a big contract from the government for bombers or something. From the way people talk, this factory will be a big one. I hope it is. It could be a good thing for the bank, I should think."

"How?"

"Oh, it might mean a lot of new depositors. They might even handle their pay roll through us. I heard somebody say they would employ at least a thousand men."

"Gee!" Charlie broke in. "Wouldn't I like to work in a place like that!" His eyes were shining with excitement.

"There's no telling." Wige smiled. "If it's as big as all that I may be promoted to vice president. The first thing I'll do will be to send you down to those springs the doctor's been talking about and get you fixed up."

"Don't talk like that." Amanda cautioned. "You know as well as I do if the bank makes any money it'll go into Mr. Higgin's pocket. Look how long your father worked there and all we have to show for it is this house. I'm glad the bank doesn't have a mortgage on it or we might lose it some day. And don't forget you may be making a sight less some time before long."

"Less?" Wige regarded her somewhat apprehensively.

"You're in the draft, aren't you? I lie awake nights thinking of it. I don't know how we'd ever manage."

"Oh, that." Wige smiled again "It will be a long time before they get to my number. And they don't want men with dependents."

"Don't be too sure. Remember you haven't any pull I'd feel so much easier if you were married. Have you seen Carol lately?"

"I saw her Sunday."

Wige lowered his eyes with that evasion. The picture of Carol stepping into that roadster appeared again in his mind, the memory made all the more poignant by reason of his mother's last statement.

"Now what's the matter?" she wanted to know "Carol and you haven't had a tiff, have you?"

"Of course not." It didn't sound so careless as he could wish.

"I'll declare I don't see why the two of you don't fix things up . . . you're neither of you getting any younger. I'd think Carol would jump at the chance to get out from under Cassie Steel's thumb. I would. Too bad her father isn't younger."

"Why?" Curiosity compelled Wige to recall his wandering thoughts.

"If they have to have men to shoot at, Andy Delaine's the kind they ought to pick. It's about all he's good for. And Carol won't ever make more than her keep as long as she stays in that office. Of course she could work there for a while after you were married just to make things a little easier for you . . . until you started having a family. I think a lot of Carol and I know well enough that the two of us would never have any trouble if she came here. That's what you ought to do."

This last argument was a familiar one, but it fell on unwilling ears tonight.

"We're not even engaged," Wige returned shortly. He turned to his brother, who sat looking into the distance, apparently giving no heed to the arrangements his mother was proposing. "What's the matter, Chuckie? You're not eating much."

"Oh, nothing. I was just thinking."

Wige knew where the boy's mind was. His half-joking reference to that hospital accounted for the wistful look in Charlie's eyes. Doc Silverthorne had confidence in the institution, but there was no money available for such an experiment. Always money. With a forced cheerfulness Wige suggested:

"I'll step out and get your magazine if you've finished. I glanced through it while I was waiting for my change and it looks right interesting. I'm going out a little later . . ."

He had made no plans for the evening, but he was conscious of an overwhelming desire to escape from the house for a little time. Even as he changed his suit he had no definite idea of where he was going, but once in his small car he drove almost automatically to Carol's gate. He did not alight at once, but sat behind the wheel and pondered. He knew it would hurt if he found she was not at home and, for the first time in his life, it would hurt if she were —if she didn't voluntarily relieve his misery and uncertainty. He couldn't ask her about this afternoon. If he never found out. As he walked slowly up the path his heart sank. From out of the gloom came the sound of Andre's zither. Something told him he would find the musician alone on the porch. He was.

"Good evening, Wige my boy! Come up and have a chair. You're just in time to prevent a near murder of 'Where by caravan has rested' Beautiful thing, but I can't somehow get the 'flowers of love and memory' to suit me. Provoking. But sit down and be comfortable."

"Is Carol at home, Mr. Delaine?"

"Not at the moment. But I'll be delighted to have your company for a bit."

"You mean she will be here soon?" Wige did not know whether to be relieved or otherwise. Perhaps it would be as well if he left word of his call; Carol would be rather sure to say where she was the next time they met. But Andre rescued him happily.

"I'm positive. Patty Garver dropped by and asked Carol to walk down to the store with her. They said something about coming back in 15 minutes or so. When you reach my age you will know that a woman's 15 minutes is a flat 40. Will you wait and learn the truth?"

"Why, yes, thank you."

Wige expected that his host would open the conversation with a dissertation about the new factory, paint the town's future in glowing terms, but he was pleasantly disappointed. Dennison's name was sure to be mentioned and Wige had no desire whatever to hear it. Andre fell back on the weather. Most unseasonable for the time of year and he predicted a thunderstorm before the night was over. That meant a change, cooler. It might even turn cold.

Wige murmured a polite assent to the prospect, but his attention was focused on the patch of light under a near-by street lamp, hoping to see Carol and her friend strolling homeward. There was one good feature about Andy Delaine's conversation. His listener didn't have to follow the flow of talk unless he wanted. When the girls finally appeared, Andre interrupted himself by lighting a match and consulting his watch. "On the dot," he chuckled. "Thanks for helping me pass a pleasant half hour, Wige." He disappeared through the front door carrying his zither with him.

The caller had another bad moment when he heard Carol urge Miss Garver to come in and sit on the porch. The answer was a meaning giggle, followed by a refusal that Wige thought unnecessarily loud.

"I wouldn't dream of it, darling! Don't you suppose I know whose car this is? And don't you do anthing I wouldn't do!" Another giggle.

Carol greeted Wige in her usual quietly-composed fashion. She was sorry she wasn't home when Wige arrived. Warm, wasn't it? She believed she would like a drink of water before she sat down. Might she bring a glass to Wige?

"How about some ice cream?" he asked. "I'll run us down to the drugstore if you'll have a dish." He had a sudden desire to be seen in Carol's company. There'd be a lot of people at Edgar's.

"Oh, I'm sorry. Patty just treated me. I think that is what has made me so thirsty. I'll be right out."

Even as her father, Carol made no mention whatever of the project that was engaging Jericho's attention almost to the exclusion of all else, and that added to her suitor's depression. Perhaps she was avoiding the topic purposely. After all, Wige had been the first to tell her of the possibility. And, at the time, she appeared to be thinking of something else. That was the day she first met this new fellow.

But Carol was ready enough to talk of other matters and Wige found himself following her lead with no particular enthusiasm, until she inquired about Charlie of whom she was very fond. It seemed to her he had walked with less difficulty the last time she saw him. If only something could be done to help if not cure his trouble. He was always so uncomplaining. And it was nothing short of marvelous the things he could do with his hands.

That was one topic that served as a balm and in a burst of gratitude Wige suggested a short ride over Carol's favorite road. Only to have his hopes dashed again.

"I'm afraid it's too late, Wige. And it's lightning. I guess you can't see it from where you're sitting."

Then it came out in a reckless blurt:

"You mean you guess my old flivver wouldn't seem comfortable after Dennison's car!"

Silence. Wige could not see Carol's face in the darkness, but he was miserably aware that she was smiling. It was not reflected, however, in her pensive conclusion.

"Well, it's hard to tell much about a car . . . after a three-block ride."

Jericho's boom was on.

The contractor for the factory's buildings had lost no time in getting his job under way. The long sidings at the Junction were filled with cars loaded with lumber, cement and other materials. A constant procession of trucks rumbled to and from the scene of operations raising clouds of dust. Big shovels, guided by the engineers' wooden stakes, grunted over their mouthfuls of clay. Occasionally a series of blasts rattled windowpanes in near-by houses.

Almost any able-bodied Jerichoan who was not averse to manual labor could find a job. Those who were not interested, but with leisure time on their hands, flocked daily to the site to watch the activity.

Bosses and workers quickly exhausted the resources of the old Hanscomb House and overflowed into any private homes that would accommodate them. Others took advantage of the greater facilities offered by Centertown, the near-by county seat. A thrifty group there lost no time in organizing a bus line to transport men to and from the new job.

LAUDS CITY FOR PORT EFFORTS; FLAYS 'CRITIC'

Ashland Association Hits at 'Gloater,' But Urges Help For Airport Here.

Officials of a private flying association in Ashland in a letter to The News-Journal took exception today to the "gloating" tone of a letter from another Ashlander last week who obviously enjoyed Mansfield's airport muddle but at the same time urged this city to "wake up and remedy" its airport faults.

Charles Shanks, chairman of the Aircraft Owners' and Pilots' association in Ashland, wrote that he was "sorry to read that an Ashland resident was small enough to write a letter gloating over Mansfield's loss of the training of 24 South American fliers due to the condition of the airport."

"We here in Ashland think James R. Harrington, airport manager, and the air-minded citizens of Mansfield have done a wonderful job," wrote Shanks. "We certainly did hate to hear of the loss of the pilot training but sincerely hope this will wake the town up and will move them to remedy the fault."

The "gloater" last week who did not sign his name, said that "at least one city in this community has enough self-respect to want a decent airport." He had comments such as "Boy, Oh Boy" and "swell" in referring to Mansfield's loss. He predicted that Ashland would build hard-surface runways and pass Mansfield in the race for owning the dominant airport in north central Ohio.

Shanks' letter, however, points out that Mansfield is years ahead of Ashland in the promotion of aviation and private flying. "Except for the big-heartedness of private interests," writes Shanks, "we would not even have an airport in this city. We can appreciate the fight that flying enthusiasts have had to get the city to improve the airport as we have fought for years trying to get Ashland to even buy one."

The chairman stated that Ashland's council has refused to recognize or do anything about the future of aviation there by transferring money from an airport appropriation to a street fund.

Santa and the WHITE ROSE

by Sigrid Arne

THE STORY SO FAR: Santa has left two infants as gifts: a boy in a peasant's cottage in King Harald's land, and a girl in a castle in the next kingdom. King Harald fears it an ill omen because the infants are two halves of a white rose.

CHAPTER THREE

SANTA CARVES A PIPE FOR KING HARALD

SANTA went straight home after he had left the girl baby in a peasant's cottage. But the winds flew faster than he did. They ran ahead and brought the news of his trip to Mrs. Santa. Then they whirled and howled around Toyland waiting for Santa.

Mrs. Santa watched anxiously at the window for him because she knew he would be worried. When she saw him coming down through the air she ran to the door and threw it open, shouting above the wind, "Hurry, I have some hot chocolate waiting for you."

Santa's pink face broke into a merry smile at that. He stamped around in the doorway shaking off the snow, and shouted back, "I want some ginger cookies, too."

She chuckled and rushed off to the kitchen. When she came back into the big room she saw Santa very busy in the window at one side of the fire-place. He was digging in a flower-pot full of good, brown earth. Then he went to a white cupboard, reached for a little silver box, and out of it he took something very tiny.

"What in the world are you doing?" asked Mrs. Santa.

"This little box was given me by the Queen of Flowers once when I was in the south," said Santa. "It holds some strange seeds. They will grow into a green vine, and if, when I plant them, I think of a certain person they will break into bloom when that person is engaged in some important business. The Queen said the blooms would be big, red flowers."

"MY GRACIOUS!" said Mrs. Santa, "why didn't you tell me that before?"

"Well, I never needed the vine before," said Santa. "But now I want to be sure to know what's happening to the boy I left in the peasant's cottage."

"Oh, hush," said Mrs. Santa, "now you're going to worry. Here, sit down and drink the hot chocolate. I do declare, those wind fairies are nice little bodies but they make it so cold." She frowned out the window where the wind fairies were kicking up great snow flurries.

So Santa sat down and took a little talking doll on his lap while he drank his hot chocolate. But he was really quite discouraged. He didn't make a toy for two weeks after that.

Santa was most worried about the good King Harald because he had always been kind to his people. Santa knew the King would be worried. And so he was. Little winds came to Santa and told him so.

Santa finally bestirred himself and said, 'Now, if I don't make another thing this year I'm going to make Harald a present the like of which he's never seen."

That took a good bit of thinking. Finally Santa decided to carve the King a very fine pipe. Around the bowl he planned to carve the three kinds of workmen who were most important to Harald's kingdom. So he carved a farmer sowing his wheat, a miner digging coal, and a sailor sailing his boat. It was a very fine pipe, but Santa was worried it wasn't fine enough.

Suddenly he felt a little "pop" on his wrist and there stood the Queen of Fairies laughing at him. She said, "I've been watching you, Santa, I can make that a very unusual pipe." She touched it with her hand, and all three little carved men stepped out onto Santa's hand. Then the Queen of Fairies touched the pipe again and the three little men stepped right back. That pipe was to be a great help to King Harald.

TOMORROW: The babies are discovered.

FIND 'MASS RADIOGRAPHY' AID IN DETECTION OF T.B.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Following successful use by the Navy, the British Air Force and Army are installing apparatus which enables tuberculosis to be detected in its earliest stages and so prevents the spread of the disease—a great danger in barrack life.

"The method used is "Mass Radiography" — the taking of x-ray photographs on miniature super-sensitive film at the rate of 200 an hour and then projecting them on to a full-size screen where specialists segregate the cases showing abnormality for detailed x-ray and treatment.

Admiralty officials, who first saw a demonstration of this apparatus at a hospital, adopted it for Royal Navy recruits.

The apparatus was transferred to a dockyard area where some 35,000 people have already been examined. More machines, which are being manufactured at the rate of 10 a month, are to be distributed among the Army and Air Force who will use them primarily for checking the fitness of men and air crews.

This is considered one of the most important advances of medical science in recent years. Its adoption in industry would mean a considerable reduction in loss of man-hours through illness and decrease of sickness benefit payments.

'WALKING BANK'

Army Sets Up Unit To Assist In Caring For Wounded.

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa.—(INS)—The difficulty of shipping blood deposits under fire has been solved by the U. S. Army with the organization of a "walking blood bank" among the 16,000 soldiers of the 28th division in training at Indiantown Gap.

About 9,000 soldiers of the "iron division" have had their blood typed and the classification has been stamped on the identification tags that record their army serial numbers.

"This gives us a walking blood bank," explained Lieut. Archie M. White, post hospital adjutant. "This method is a lot more dependable under actual battle conditions than the bank where blood in various forms is stored."

Lieut. White explained that difficulties in shipping blood during a battle often cause fatal delays but pointed out that the new system makes all types of blood immediately available in emergency cases.

Milk production in the United States reached 51 billion quarts in 1940, a new record.

"BIG FAMILY" REVIEWED BY MRS. BENNINGHOFF

Bellamy Partridge Describes His Youth In Way That Recalls Those Days for Readers and for Those Who Heard Review.

PAGES from Bellamy Partridge's best seller, "Big Family," seemed to "come to life" as Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff, of Cleveland, presented a delightful review of the book at the First Congregational church Tuesday afternoon. This was the third in a series of book reviews given here by Mrs. Benninghoff under the auspices of the Women's association of the church.

Many persons in the audience were recalling the days of their childhood and youth as they left the church auditorium. That is one reason for the popularity of "Big Family." It encourages reminiscence. Two years ago Mr. Partridge's book, "Country Lawyer," which shows his father at work, was published and was so great a success that he wrote "Big Family" to describe "Father at Home"—and not only father, but Grandmother Bellamy, Mother Partridge and eight third-generation Partridges: Herb, Thad, Stan, Bellamy, Leslie, Louise, Cecilia and Elsie. Mrs. Benninghoff pointed out, however, that "Big Family" is not only a biography of the Partridge family, but of an era, from about 1850 to 1914.... "A good way of life and a way of good living."

Dramatizing various passages from the book and using anecdotes from it copiously, Mrs. Benninghoff described the Partridge family life from the time Mr. and Mrs. Partridge were married and began housekeeping in a 16-room home. The author tells his readers that his mother believed in having a big family because (1) the older children would take care of the younger ones and would thus acquire a "sense of responsibility"; (2) the little children would learn from the older ones and thus be more advanced; and (3) she was a W. C. T. U. worker and wanted to raise "an army of soldiers for the W. C. T. U." But none of these plans materialized.

In an interesting way, the author, through Mrs. Benninghoff, revealed that the older children were always too busy playing to take care of their younger brothers and sisters; that the examples set by the older children were not of a kind that would "advance" the little ones, and by the time the children were grown up, laws and attitude toward prohibition had changed so that the Partridges never became "soldiers in the W. C. T. U. army." However, Mother Partridge still advocated a big family.

Readers of the newest Partridge book learn that the children's mother went from the village of Phelps, N. Y., into Rochester, once a year to buy a complete outfit of clothing for each boy and girl. Food was bought in wholesale lots, and although the family had beef in various forms for every meal on several consecutive days, no one ever complained. Father Partridge insisted upon punctuality at meals and that was one thing in which he practiced what he preached, according to the author.

Grandmother Bellamy is one of the book's important characters, just as she was important in the lives of the Partridges. Her literal belief in every word of the Bible resulted in many interesting agreements and differences with various members of the family.

The book is divided into universal categories such as books, medicine, music, clothes, society, sex, religion, food, dancing, education and drama. There are numerous anecdotes that will "bang a responsive gong in the heart of practically any one over forty, or of any one over four who ever had a grandfather," as a New York literary critic reported.

The way Mother Partridge deals with the servant problem, father's suffering in silence when his wife replaces all his "dear old stand-bys" with pieces of art, and many other incidents in the lives of the eleven members of the Partridge household are ample reasons for the spectacular jump of "Big Family" to fourth place on the national best seller list.

Mrs. Benninghoff will present a review on the evening of April 13. The program will be open to the public.

A. A. U. W. MEMBERS HEAR TWO SPEAKERS

"First Line of Defense" Is Subject of Talk Given By Dr. Helen Hunscher; Dr. Esther Mast Interprets Nutrition In Menu.

MRS. H. E. BAER, home management supervisor for the Farm Security Administration, planned and executed a highly informative and educational program for the American Association of University Women at their dinner meeting at the First Congregational church last evening.

The theme of "Proper Nutrition" was carried out from the decorative art puzzles of fruits and vegetables from which members found their dinner partners, to the table decorations of artistic arrangements of fruits and vegetables set on red, white and blue streamers (symbolizing food for defense), to the menu carefully planned as to the proper food units; its explanation by Dr. Esther Mast, of Lexington, and the fine talk on "The First Line of Defense" by Dr. Helen Hunscher of Western Reserve university.

Pointing out that government, science and industry were all intensely interested in nutrition and the building up of a strong nation, Dr. Hunscher told the University Women that all homemakers needed to be conscious that nutrition can be applied in the home three times a day. She said the present problem was "How to get people to do the things they already do—better than they are doing now?" Education, constant reiteration by home economic writers, radio programs and health are necessary to impress upon our people that we must eat proper foods in proper proportions, she said.

Dr. Mast, in interpreting the menu, showed how the menu would help combat secondary anemia which was found so prevalent when the great numbers of men recently drafted had physical examinations.

The dietary postulates set forth by Dr. Mast are: "A citrus fruit once a day; a whole grain cereal in some form; meat four times a week with liver, heart or kidney at least once a week; one egg a day, two pats of butter, three servings of vegetables a day, one should be green or yellow and one must be leafy; at least six glasses of water a day; plenty of salt, milk and whole grain bread.

A delightful Christmas musical program, planned by Miss Fannie Lew Miller, preceded the main speaker of the evening. The Girls' Glee club, made up of girls from the seventh and eighth grades at John Simpson Junior high school, sang three Christmas carols, directed by their president, Helen Zivkoff. "While By My Sheep," a German carol; "Dear Baby Jesus," solo parts sung by Helen Carmen and Constance Seminoff. "Twixt Ox and Ass," a French carol, was the last of the numbers by the choir. Miss Jean Ann Schmidt sang a vocal solo, "Birthday of a King" by Neidlinger.

An instrumental ensemble of A. A. U. W. members played "Love Light" by Clarence Kohlmann. This group consists of Miss Pearl Danback, flute; Mrs. Howard Diller, cello; Miss Mary Gracy, violin, and Miss Eiler at the piano.

A business meeting conducted by Miss Margaret DeWitt followed the program. Guests included Miss Elizabeth Bay and Mrs. J. A. Greene.

THE LUNCHBOX ITSELF

Select a wide, shallow metal box with a handle and with one or two small vacuum jars or bottles. This box is easier to pack and unpack than a narrow, deep one.

Wrap each food securely in heavy waxed paper. Firmly fold over the edges of the paper or hold in place with rubber bands. Well-wrapped foods hold up well.

If salt or sugar is carried in a shaker, cover top with waxed paper held tight with rubber band.

Relishes (carrot strips, radishes, pickles, olives, celery) carry well in small relish or cheese jars. Cakes, cookies, wafers, raisins and nuts can be placed in small covered pasteboard boxes lined with waxed paper.

Unpack the box as soon as it reaches home after school. Wash and wipe out and place on shelf to air. Wash and thoroughly rinse in boiling water the vacuum jars and bottles and invert to dry.

Give the jars and box a weekly soda-water bath and a good airing in the sun.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"I shall tell Lillian immediately," I said, and hurried out of the Underwood living room as if the traditional Furies were after me. My brain was buzzing with conjectures as to the reason for this delay in bringing the surgeon to Harry's relief. From his former actions, I would have thought that the journey to the wounded man's room would have been a matter of seconds instead of minutes.

But I knew that he must have a vitally important reason for detaining the surgeon in talk before he should go upstairs, and slowly I began to perceive a possible reason for the delay.

Yet all this was none of my business, I told myself, and with the remembrance of my father's scathing strictures vividly before me, I put conjecture out of my mind and concentrated on my errand, as I knocked lightly upon the door of Harry Underwood's room where he lay wounded.

Lillian Resentful.

Miss Whitlock opened the door and beyond her I saw Harry lying on the bed, pallid and with closed eyes, while Lillian, seated close to the bedside, with one hand resting upon his uninjured one, bent toward him in anxious scrutiny.

"The surgeon is downstairs," I said in low tones. "My father asked me to tell you he would be up here in less than five minutes."

"Good!" Miss Whitlock said, but Lillian shot a rebellious look toward us, and I knew that she must have heard the bell heralding the surgeon's advent, and was resenting any delay in his coming to the aid of her wounded husband.

"Father took Dr. Twitchell to the basement," I said in a low tone, "so that he could give a sedative to the gangster with the shattered leg. When they came back to the living room, Father asked the surgeon for a minute or two, and sent me on ahead to tell you he would be here presently."

Makes No Comment.

Into Lillian's eyes, there flashed suddenly a look of conjecture which I intuitively knew matched the thought which had come into my own mind. She looked straight at me for a second, nodded almost imperceptibly, then went back to her vigil with no comment. I knew that she wished Harry to hear no disturbing word.

Miss Whitlock pulled forward a low chair for me and I sank into it gladly. Then, with her back to the bed, the nurse wrote on a note pad, then handed it to me.

"When the surgeon has finished here," the note read, "will I be needed downstairs? Just nod or shake your head?"

I nodded vigorously and she took back the pad and wrote again.

"Then I'll be getting my things together. Please give this to Mrs. Underwood."

She scribbled another note and handed it to me.

"I have to go to my room for a minute or two," it read. "Please ask Mrs. Graham to come for me if you need me, or if the surgeon comes back before I get back."

Nurse Getting Ready.

She was out of the room leaving the door ajar, by the time I reached Lillian's side. Lillian read the note, nodded, and handed it back to me. I stood for a second, looking down at Harry's inert form, then returned to my chair for the tedious task of waiting.

The nurse must have a marvelous sense of timing, I decided, when she came into the room again only a split second before my father with the surgeon reached the top of the stairs and came along the corridor to the door. She had set a small case against the wall and, correct in every detail of her uniform, stood at attention as the surgeon entered.

"Ah, Miss Whitlock!" the surgeon said. "This is my good luck, to find you here."

"Thank you, Dr. Twitchell," she said. Then the surgeon advanced toward Harry Underwood's bedside and, stooping over him, put his fingers on the pulse.

Harry Greets Surgeon.

The wounded man's eyelids lifted languidly, and he regarded the surgeon with a weak but gallant attempt at a grin.

"Hello, Doc!" he said feebly. "Didn't think when I last saw you down at the hideaway that I'd be needing you myself."

"The surgeon looked at him keenly.

"Suppose you keep quiet for a change," he said genially, but with a distinct mandate in his voice. "I'd rather talk to your nurse, anyway."

"Who wouldn't?" his irrepressible patient countered gallantly, but the surgeon snapped out a peremptory "Keep quiet!" and turned to Miss Whitlock with a question.

"Is the bullet still in the wound," he asked.

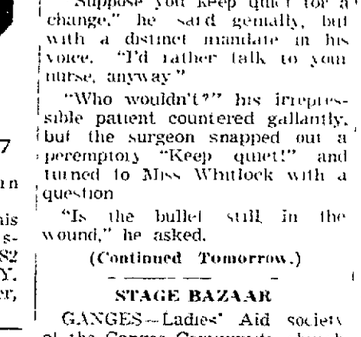
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

ALL ARE IMPORTANT

There is no such thing as an unimportant card. The lowliest spot in your hand may prove the backbreaker, if it is used to fullest advantage. Many a trick has depended on a negative signal of a little card which tells your partner to shift suits. Then of course, there are signals which he disregards if he is one of those fellows who will notice a high card but pay no attention to his baby brother.



(Dealer, West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Dbl	4 ♣	4 ♠
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	5 ♥
Dbl	5 ♠	Pass	Pass
Dbl

West led his diamond K at both tables of a duplicate where the bidding was about as given. In each case East played the 4. One West obeyed that indication, but the other went on heedlessly and led the diamond A. That cost his side a trick.

South, of course, pleased to see the diamond Q thus established, ruffed. He finessed the spade 9, used the diamond Q for a club discard, led the diamond 6 for a ruff, finessed the spade Q and had a perfect count on North's hand. 5 clubs, 3 spades, 1 diamonds and 1 heart. Playing West for a singleton A, he led the heart 10. Taking the A, West returned the spade K to the A. The heart K won and the 10 lost to the Q, but that was all for the defenders as the club A was ruffed in the dummy, which also had two good hearts.

(Dealer, North. East-West vulnerable.)

Following a spade lead by West how should South plan his play for 6-Spades on this deal?

The other West, who obeyed the 4 signal on his diamond K, then laid down the heart A and led the spade 2. South won, finessed the spade Q, then laid down the A. But he had to lose two more tricks, one in hearts and one in clubs. He could ruff only one club, and never was able to set up the diamond Q for a discard of the other. Consequently he was set two tricks, instead of only one, because West heeded his partner's signal to shift.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, December 4.

A continuance of yesterday's promises for opportunity, progress and personal satisfactions regarding ambitious objectives is indicated by the lunar and mutual aspects of important planets. This good fortune may be expected to expand and solidify under the urge of unusual energy, initiative and determination but it would be well to use sound judgment in the matter of outlay of funds and to refrain from personal extravagances and indulgences. There is an element of the subtle, secret, intriguing which may prove productive in contacting or making strategic moves with large organizations.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of definite progress and expansion and solidifying of important projects, with the most cherished ambitions reaching noteworthy performance and satisfaction. Large interests or contacts with major corporations, secret bodies political or fraternal, may be fostered by shrewdness, sagacity or very clever strategies. But in all shun personal excesses and extravagances, and be prudent in outlay of business funds. Also exercise care with papers, and legal matters. Use tact and diplomacy.

COUNCIL TO ASK SURPLUS SHARE

City Fathers Vote Seven To Two To Ask Funds From Sales Tax Melon.

be split up in the same manner as the $12,000,000 turned back to the local governmental units annually, it was estimated Mansfield would receive about $40,000.

Miller and members of the new council, who will take office after the first of the year, said last week that they favor the immediate improvement of the airport. It was pointed out that the $40,000 could be used by the city as the sponsor's share for a WPA project to construct hard-surface runways at the port.

Richland county including Mansfield and all government units would receive about $100,000 from the surplus division.

Miller stated that the city had paid in the "excessive" tax and were entitled to a share of the surplus. "If a three per cent tax gives us a surplus," said Miller, "it should be reduced to two or two and a half per cent. When the sales tax law was enacted, it was not intended to create a surplus."

Serving on the committee which will attend the Columbus meeting to "demand" the city's share will be Miller, Shultz, George L. Berg and Auditor Kelley.

Mayor Locke would not say definitely today whether or not he would attend the meeting along with council's committee. He previously branded the plan as a "political move against Gov. John Bricker" and said he would not ask any share for Mansfield.

Today, the mayor said that he had not been invited to attend. Neither had he been invited to attend by council, he said

"I will continue to keep an ear to the ground, however," said the mayor, "and will act accordingly."

Porch opposed the sending of a delegation, saying that the city would receive its share of the fund even if it was not represented at the meeting. He predictd that business would suffer a reversal next year and that the sales tax surplus would be needed.

Miller reminded Porch that the meeting was not to merely "collect" the city's share but to help force the state to give up the share. He also pointed out that even though sales tax receipts may drop that the city's 1942 share would still be based upon the $12,000,000 set aside annually for distribution.

Asked for comment on the move, Democratic members, four attending their last regular meeting, said that if the city had a share coming to it that it should be collected. All supported the use of funds for improvement of the airport.

Councilman C. N. Shultz stated that he could see no harm in attending the meeting to learn if the city had any claim on a surplus share. Porch was in outright opposition to the plan. Kyle made no comment except to inquire why city officials could not handle the matter

Some men are born great some achieve greatness and the majority do not trouble themselves very much about it.

Aspiring Author Faces Loss of Funds as U. S. Opens Probe of 'Racket.'

Contra said that he had submitted four manuscripts to the publisher and had agreed to pay $400 toward the publication of the stories. In return he was to receive 400 volumes and expected to profit from their sale and from future royalties.

His book, which is an adventure story, was to have been published last spring but failed to appear. Contra said he continued making payments but also made inquiries. At last he asked that his contract be broken and that his manuscripts be returned.

Contra said that the company refused to release him from the contract but did return the other manuscripts. Then he received a letter from the publisher saying that they were to be prosecuted and asking that he come to New York, expenses paid, to testify for the company.

The Mansfield youth said he refused to go because of work here and stopped making monthly payments. In all he had paid out $275, he said.

Contra has been writing since he graduated from Mansfield Senior High school six years ago. This was his first attempt to have any of his works published.

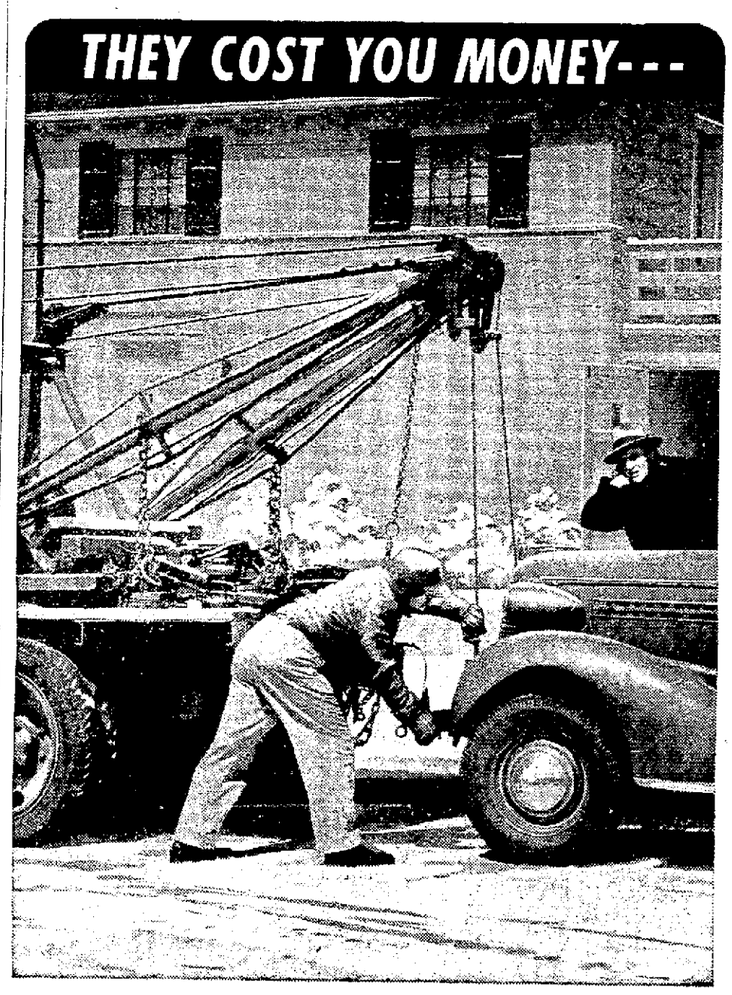
Why not Avoid STARTING FAILURES?

THEY COST YOU MONEY---



---THEY COST YOU TIME

It's so easy to avoid them—just use SOHIO's fast-starting gasoline and lubricants—and you get a written starting guarantee!

Perhaps you can afford to pay your share of the estimated million dollars that starting failures cost Ohio motorists each year.

But a bigger loss that can't be afforded this year is time — time wasted from working hours when motors fail to go. Just as important is the huge amount of gasoline wasted by slow starts.

SOHIO offers you the easiest, simplest and cheapest way to avoid this loss—Guaranteed Winter Starting. It's free—doesn't cost you one extra penny—if you use SOHIO Winter gasoline, motor oil and gear oil, and have a normal winter-strength battery. (Simply the minimum precautions car-makers recommend). And if your motor ever fails to start, Standard Oil will pay the cost of garage service to start you.

When it costs nothing extra, why not protect yourself against time lost from work . . . gasoline waste . . . inconvenience . . . spending your money needlessly for starting failures? This winter—drive a car that's guaranteed to start.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — Among the shortages rapidly developing in materials for defense is a shortage in defense man-power. Like so many other problems of the draft this also is not new. In the last war it was found that, in the early regulations, no discrimination had been made between the kind of physical qualifications required for fighting in the front line trenches, for rolling pills in a medical supply depot and for tens of thousands of other jobs that could have been handled as easily by men with slight physical disqualifications.

Johnson

On the great reclassification of December, 1917, men were classified physically as between those who were fit for any kind of combat service and those who, while not so generally fit, were fully competent to handle the ordinary tasks of life of which there are many classifications in the army.

Sometimes the other qualifications so far out-weigh the purely physical ones that the difference is grotesque. We once filled a requisition for pigeoneers (experts in handling carrier pigeons) and, more as a joke than otherwise one army detachment rejected one of these specialists, not because he had a wooden leg, but because it had a knot-hole in it. By that time the principle of making common sense use of our military material had been so generally recognized and approved that, when wooden legs didn't interfere with the special duty desire, it didn't interfere with acceptance.

This whole subject is rapidly becoming a very serious one today. The navy which has not looked with favor upon conscription, and did not do so at the beginning of the last war, is beginning to feel a pinch that will soon cause its acceptance although this will require some change in the law.

The need for various types of skills, both in the army and the navy as well as in industry, will very soon require the use of women and girls in many such jobs as moulders and pattern makers where they frequently do better than men.

If carefully applied this principle alone will release many thousands of highly skilled workmen. Too rigid physical requirements and application of the 28 year rule may deprive the armed services of men that will become absolutely indispensible in this highly mechanized war. The changes made through what appeared to be expedient at the time when the revised plan was adopted are now appearing not to have looked far enough forward. These matters are too serious to permit pride in a hastily made decision to stand in the way of correcting it.

We will soon find that we cannot afford to waste a single skilled man on an unskilled job or not to utilize every person of either sex available for training for skilled jobs whether in uniform or not.

The matter of using women can be carried to extremes. They have no appropriate effectiveness in actually bearing arms or in the heavier tasks of truck driving and the like. But there are plenty of places where the deftness, accuracy and speed of their fingers, hands and minds are more useful than those of men.

TRAIN PLUNGES THROUGH OPEN DRAWBRIDGE

Engineer Believed Drowned, Passengers Escape In Indiana Wreck.

(By International News Service)

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind—The Diesel-powered streamlined locomotive of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad's Shenandoah limited was buried nose deep in 22 feet of water in the Indiana Harbor ship canal today after plunging through an open drawbridge.

Jack O'Conor, 60, of Garrett, Ind., engineer of the train, was missing and believed to have been drowned in his cab.

Six of the pasesnger train's 12 cars were derailed, but remained upright, and railroad officials said no passengers were injured.

The Shenandoah left Chicago at 10 o'clock last night enroute to Pittsburgh, and the accident occurred shortly after it had passed through South Chicago at 10:31.

The Shenandoah formerly was known as the Fort Pitt limited and the B. and O. train dispatcher at first identified the train as the Fort Pitt.

The locomotive was of the two-section type known among trainmen as a "double-header." "O'Connor was in the forepart of the engine, which dove into the water. The train fireman, whose name was reported only as "Moody," was in the after section of the engine, which did not go into the canal. He jumped to safety.

Trainmen said the drawbridge, which was raised from the opposite side of the canal from which the train approached, had been lifted to permit passage of a cargo vessel to adjacent steel mills.

How the accident happened was not clear. A towerman at the scene said a red signal had been displayed to stop the Shenandoah, but due to a heavy fog it was considered possible the engineer may not have been able to see the signal.

As the investigation went forward, the missing engineer emerged as a hero who apparently gave his own life to save those of the approximately 150 passengers aboard the train.

Witnesses said that showers of sparks flew from the wheels of the locomotive as it ploughed up the track for several hundred feet before toppling into the river, and rail officials discovered by examination of the second section of the engine that all brakes were set and the speed reversed.

From these facts, it appeared O'Connor had stayed with his train to the last, doing all in his power to halt the speeding streamliner.

Councilman George C. Kyle gave fellow-councilmen and spectators at the council meetng last night a laugh when he was given a bad steer or rather "Stier." Miss Theresa Stier of Sherman avenue had entered a claim for $15 for the repair of windows in a home adjoining a playground. Later Philip Stier of Westwood avenue entered a claim for $6 20 for cutting weeds in a vacant lot. Kyle voted against the second claim twice and then arose to make a long speech against the payment of the claim. It appears that Kyle was still thinking of the first claim, however, and his talk was somewhat confusing. After being straightened out, Kyle admitted he had been given a bad "steer" and approved the second claim.

The women in the home demonstration groups conducted throughout the county by Miss Elizabeth Bay, county home demonstration agent, will have the opportunity to try their hand at making bath salts for Christmas gifts. Equipment in the form of perfume oil combined with coloring is arriving at Miss Bay's office for the women to pick up at their convenience. This oil will be mixed with sodium sesquicarbonite and the bath salts will also contain a water softener. Water softeners were studied under the general theme of "household economies" by the women during the past year.

The biggest problem still facing Richland county selective service boards is what to do with registrants who marry just before they are scheduled to take their physical examinations or have been ordered to report for army service. Few newly-married registrants are deferred just on the basis of their marriage and none unless it can be proved definitely that their induction would impose a hardship on their wives. Board clerks said it is always difficult to prove that the registrant's marriage was for the purpose of helping him to escape the draft, so boards must draw a line somewhere. Dozens of men now serving in the army from the county left just after their marriage, and board clerks predict that more of them will go as the supply of men decreases.

Action Hits Production at $57,000,000 Government Shell-Loading Plant.

(By Associated Press)

RAVENNA — Four unions called a strike today of production, transportation and maintenance workers at the government's $57,000,000 shell-loading plant near here, it was announced by R. R. Walker, president of the Arsenal Workers of America.

He said the strike was caused by a refusal of the Atlas Power company to sign a contract, which the company "previously had indicated was satisfactory to them."

Picket lines were scheduled for 8 a. m.

A strike was called for Nov. 13, postponed to Nov. 19 and then postponed indefinitely when the unions began protesting what they termed "war department delay" in approval of the contract, which they claimed the unions and the company had agreed upon.

In announcing the strike, Walker declared, that negotiations in Washington disclosed the war department need not approve the contract.

"Now Atlas wants to back out on a contract which they agreed to weeks ago," he asserted.

Between 1,000 and 1,500 workmen are involved, said Walker. The unions calling the strike were the Arsenal Workers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, both independent groups, and two AFL affiliates, the Switchmen's Union of North America and the Machinists union.

Construction workers numbering about 11,000, engaged in completing the plant, are employed by the Hunkin-Conkey Construction company and were not subject to the strike call.

Walker said the contract covers wages and working conditions. In a meeting yesterday, company officials "wanted to re-open negotiations, but we refused," he asserted.

W. E. Fletcher, local manager for Atlas, which is in charge of plant operations, said the contract had not been signed, but that he had no notification of the strike.

Two load lines now are in operation at the works, but the rate of production is not disclosed, at the request of the army.

Broadway Rose clinging to Sammy Kaye in front of Lindy's until he brushes her off with a bill.

George Balanchine, who flies to the coast at Christmastime to confer with Gregory Ratoff on the movie version of "Of Thee I Sing." That ought to be a killer-diller. A satire on American politics, produced by two Russians!

Fables From the Forties: Funny on Broadway how showgirls can start out together—share the same dressing rooms, the same applause, the same first taste of glamor—then lose sight of each other, for a long time, maybe forever.

Sometimes they meet by accident after they've travelled widely different paths, and are mutually astonished to find they no longer know each other, really. Sure, they started out with the same things—youth, beauty, ambition—but fate handed them contrasting destinies and they find they're paradoxically old friends and strangers.

Take the two who ran into each other accidentally the other night at LaHiff's Tavern. They hadn't exchanged so much as a "hello" since 1924 when both were among the youngest and loveliest of the beauties in Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

One of them was laden with furs, and diamonds glittered from her long tapering hands. The other wore a plain navy blue dress with a starched white collar. And they chatted affectionately, although it was obviously quite a strain to find things to talk about.

One of them was Bessie King, whose history is simple. After she left the "Vanities" she enjoyed a certain amount of fame as a singer, then she married a lad named Donald Quinn and they've been happily married for 11 years. Now she's the checkroom girl at the Tavern.

The other beauty was Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Her history since she left the "Vanities" is more complicated, but you know it well.

And as Peggy waved goodbye, Bessie King sighed and watched her go through the revolving door.

"Peggy was always such a swell girl," she said softly. "I wonder if she's ever been really happy. Like me. I've had more than my share!"

FULL HOUSE LAUGHS, PRAISES COMMUNITY PLAYERS IN COMEDY

By ESTHER SMITH

The Mansfield Community Players 16th season got off to an auspicious start Tuesday night when the largest cast in the history of the organization presented "The Man Who Came to Dinner" before a capacity audience in John Simpson auditorium.

The amusing and not too infrequent broad and biting lines of this three-act comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman drew continuous laughter from the opening curtain to the final curtain call as the audience was taken into a mid-western Ohio home turned into a three-ring circus with a New York literary light as the chief ringmaster.

Presented against a stage set that was striking in its modern decor and highligted by backdrops of shimmering white silk, the play moved at a rapid pace with "Sheridan Whiteside," as the autocrat directing the action.

A lecture engagement before a woman's club had brought the New York literary lion to Mesalia, Ohio, in the first place but a piece of ice on the doorstep and a subsequent fractured hip had been responsible for keeping him there in the home of Mesalia's well-meaning citizens, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Stanley.

Any fond hopes that had been held by Mrs. Stanley about converting her living room in a temporary salon when the author and critic was able to occupy a wheel chair was rudely shattered by the distinguished visitor himself. Whiteside's own intention, he said, was to occupy the living room without intrusion from the Stanley family or their affairs.

Ernest J. Wessen, Mansfield book collector, made his bow with the Players in the role of "Whiteside," one of the numerous new Players to make their appearance with the organization this season.

Bearing a marked resemblance to Alexander Woollcott, the drama critic and author, after whose personality the role of "Whiteside" was supposedly patterned, Wessen dominated the situation from within the confines of his wheel chair which he left only a couple of times for a few brief moments. These moments occurred when "Whiteside" felt that the eyes of the Stanley household would not be upon him.

"Whiteside's" reign in the Stanley home brings an array of personalities to his side both from his own world and that of Mesalia. The former includes his own secretary, "Maggie Cutler," an efficient young woman without whom Whiteside would be quite lost in Mesalia, and an assortment of characters ranging from an insect professor to a temperamental actress, playwright and actor.

Miss Ann Menrath played the likeable "Maggie" who borrowed a trick or two from her boss when he attempted to end her romance with Mesalia's young newspaper editor, "Bert Jefferson," by importing an actress-friend, Lorraine Sheldon."

Miss Virginia Jenkins energized the part of the volatile "Miss Sheldon," who pitted her wits against "Maggie," while Alvin Krieg portrayed the role of the sincere young newspaper man and did a convincing "drunk scene" during the course of his part.

The audience was enthusiastic over the cast and gave vent to their enthusiasm with frequent applause. The play-goers particularly liked the roles of "Banjo," patterned after Harpo Marx and played by John Laurence Mellert, that of "Beverly Carlton," a take-off on Noel Coward, presented by George Tuttle, and a minor role, that of Harriet Stanley, and an odd character, portrayed by Mrs. H. H. Schettler.

Miss Sylvia Frankel as the solicitious "Mrs Stanley," and Don Denman, her husband, incensed at being driven out of his own house, were others in the large cast that drew the admiration of the audience.

To Mrs. E. K. Bacon goes much of the credit for the performance, a reflection of weeks of painstaking rehearsal under her direction.

Roles that aided materially to the enjoyment of the audience were those of the Stanley son and daughter, "Richard," played by William Zimmerman, and "Joan," Jo Ann Catell; "Dr. Bradley," Gerald Van Arnam; "Sandy," Jane Stanley's sweetheart, Ford Loykovich; "Miss Preen," a nurse, Lois Weingartner; "John," the buller, Neal Thomas; "Sarah," the maid, Dorothea Grimes; two club women, "Mrs. Dexter," Dorothy Bacon; "Mrs. MucCutcheon," Ethel Van Arnam; luncheon guests, Albert Jarvis and William Flinn; prison guard, James Peck, expressmen, William Flinn and James Peck; "Wescott," Richard Nixon; radio technician, Richard Olin, deputies, Bruce Hardy and Albert Rosenkranz, and plain clothesman, Lloyd Brown; choir boys, George Knackstedt, Robert Myers, John Hall, Robert Craft, Robert Schrack, William Boyd and Paul Pfahler.

Musical interludes were furnished by a pit orchestra supplied by the Mansfield Musicians association under the direction of Laurence Todd.

The production staff included Louis Meisse, technical director, who was responsible for the set; Martha Hartman and Barbara Hartman, properties; Herbert Schettler, make-up; Mrs. Louis Meisse, costumes; Earl Black, music; Tom Maloney, assistant technical director; Ed Smith, lights; technical staff, Chris Hughes, Jack Shafer, Vernon Crabb; business manager, Harvey Bailey.

NLRB Gets Query About Bargaining Agents In Defense

WASHINGTON—(AP)—AFL and CIO arguments over how to ascertain bargaining agencies for workers in new defense plants rested before the National Labor Relations board today.

The issue was presented yesterday by AFL's International Association of Machinists seeking certification as bargaining agency for production workers at the naval ordnance plant operated in Canton, O., by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

Paul Hutchinson, counsel for IAM, contended that the organization has as members a majority of the workers, while James Mattles, representing CIO's United Electrical Workers opposed the petition on the grounds that the present number of workers constituted only a small percentage of the total to be employed when the plant was in full production.

"This," said Hutchinson, "is a government plant and Westinghouse is the lessee subject to naval control. Are the employes supposed to wait for unpredictable developments before they can invoke the services of the board to obtain certification to be represented by an organization of their choice?"

Declaring that the plant now employed roughly 450 of the anticipated workers, Mattles contended at least 50 per cent should be on the job before certification of a bargain agent.

HEALTH RECORD SHOWS GAIN IN COUNTY BIRTHS

10 Per Cent Increase Over Last Year Reported By Commissioner.

A ten per cent increase in births in Mansfield and Richland county during the past year was reported today by Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner.

Dr. Wild said the increase was general throughout the nation. The U. S. Census bureau reports a population gain of more than a million in 12 months.

The health commissioner stated that 875 babies were born in Mansfield this year up until the end of October. Up until the same time last year, only 754 had been born.

Richland county outside of Mansfield reported 204 new births through October, 12 more than in the first ten months of 1940.

Both units together report a total birth increase of 133 over last year. The total this year was 1,079 as compared to a combined figure of 946 in 1940.

Dr. Wild said that although November figures had not been recorded as yet that an even greater increase than ten per cent may be expected for the entire year.

National figures have been compiled only up until April. Blessed events in the year ending April 1 were approximately 183,000 more than the average year of the past decade, the U. S. Census bureau reported. Mainly because of this, the nation's estimated population climbed from 131,669,275 on April 1, 1940, to 132,818,005. There were 85,486 more immigrants than emigrants, and that helped, too.

The census bureau reported that the excess of births over deaths in the 12-month period was approximately 169,000 more than the ten-year average.

It gave two reasons: there are more women in the 20 to 44 year age group, who have most of the babies, and there was a 20 per cent increase in the number of marriages.

Lakewood Man Gets Patent on Coin-Controlled Doorbell.

LAKEWOOD—(INS)—The government has been talking about self-liquidating projects for so long that it has finally made an impression upon an inventor. Murray P. Torrence has recently been issued a patent on a coin-controlled doorbell device.

Here's the idea—A magazine solicitor, collector of one's mother-in-law pays the home a visit. Light heartedly bounding up the front steps in anticipation of a cheery welcome, the caller is confronted with the Torrence doodad which stops them in their tracks.

In order to attract the attention of the householder it is necessary to drop a nickel in the doorbell device and then if the coin is not a phoney you press the button and the bell rings as of yore. In other words—no nickel no ring. And if no ring then no answer to the door. Of course if no one answers, the bell ringer gets his money back.

One thrifty housewife has suggested that she might entertain five days a week. The coin in the front door gadget to pay for the bridge prizes and eats.

DESERT YIELDS AS DAMS FILL ARIZONA LAKES

Season Is Most Bountiful For Salt River Valley Irrigation District.

(By United Press)

PHOENIX, Ariz.—The tremendous Salt River Valley irrigation district that turned thousands of square miles of Arizona desert into rich farm land for the growth of citrus fruits and winter vegetables shipped throughout the nation is experiencing its most bountiful year in history.

Huge reservoirs behind irrigation dams contain 1,500,000 acre feet of water in comparison to the 22,426 acre feet that left mere puddles last year. The water stored never will drop below 1,000,000 acre-feet this year, according to engineers.

But just one year ago the reservoirs of the Salt River Valley Water Users Association held the least amount of water they had retained since construction of the Roosevelt Dam in 1912.

Roosevelt Lake was dry last year. Cattle grazed on the lowest part of its bed, where the soil contained enough maisture to encourage growth of scattered grass patches.

The Salt river from which the farmers get their irriagtion water, which really is not salt at all, became a mere trickle flowing past the empty lake and down the dam penstock to turn a turbine.

It became necessary to construct a new steam plant to supply power needed in the valley for domestic purposes.

Not a single generator hummed from Roosevelt to Stewart Mountain Dam. The farmers became alarmed and the Water Users Association voted $2,500,000 in bonds to drill wells.

A power line was rushed by the U. S. Reclamation Service from Boulder Dam to Phoenix.

There even was controversy over ownership and sharing of the underground reservoir that was counted on as a common supply for drinking and irrigation water when huge Deisel pumps were put into action to relieve the shortage.

Many farmers talked of giving up their ranches and the battle against the dryness and heat of the desert that had been carried on for years to wrest a living from the sand.

Dust storms added to the difficulties and the parched soil showed huge cracks.

Then the pumps that worked night and day in wells drilled with equipment rushed to the area began to gain and by the end of October the stored water level crept up to 70,428 feet. But this still was far from the capacity of 1,953,793.

Then shortly after Christmas great storms swept over the state leaving tons of water on the watershed and before Jan. 1 the water level rose to 368,336 feet and farmers began to take new hope.

The amazing deluge continued up to 500,000-acre feet in storage, then 750,000 and finally the 2,000,000-acre foot mark was passed on February 25. For the first time in 21 years Roosevelt Dam spilled over in April.

Free water was distributed to farmers until late in June. This doesn't mean much to the average seaboard citizen but to Arizonians it meant new life from their crops, new value for their lands and was as good as money in the bank.

Now Bartlett Dam has been built and some of the Verde river water trapped, bringing the hope that the drouth of last year never will be repeated.

WIRED FOR BLACKOUTS

MIAMI, Fla.—(U.P.)—City-owned Jackson Memorial hospital is being prepared for any emergency which might arise in case of war, Dr Robert T. Spicer, of the executive board, said a warning system has been installed which provides for a blackout, yet permits all vital functions of the hospital to continue operating.

INVENTS NEW TYPE CONCRETE

PHILADELPHIA —(U.P.)— The practicability of using concrete in shipbuilding—first approached in the World war — has come up again.

Karl P. Billner, inventor of a newly-discovered vacuum dried concrete, says that hulls of 10,000-ton tankers could be built with the preparation in four weeks or less and still give the ship the same lightness and strength as steel.

In a demonstration before the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Billner applied 12,500 pounds pressure per square inch to a concrete slab, 12 feet long and two and a half inches thick, before it cracked. During the test the specially prepared slab bent five inches in the center.

Always listen patiently to the opinion of others; the chances are you will derive no benefit therefrom, but it will please them.

Haste makes some people waste a lot of other people's time.

Boudreau To Have Vet Help

Young Indian Gets Aid From 2 Old Hands at Game.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — (AP) — The Clevalnd Indians' department of brains and strategy now presents a remarkable picture of being prepared for practically anything, short of torpedoes.

Burt Shotton, whose age is 57, and whose experience is broad enough to cover managerial jobs in the majors and minors, was named an Indian coach late yesterday along with Ol Os' Melillo, who at 39 is making a trek back to the tepee after leaving when Oscar Vitt was banished. They replace Earl Whitehill and Dutch Zwilling, but George Susce remains.

Starting from the top, that gives Cleveland a man in the front office who in two separate terms has managed the team—Lou Boudreau; a coach who was loyal to Vitt in the unpleasantness of 1940, in which Boudreau had no part—Melillo; a coach whose Columbus team won the little world series last season and whose specialty is handling rookies—Shottin; and the coach and bull-pen catcher who shepherd's Pitchers—Susce.

This cluster of variegated talent around Boudreau seems to fit in with his announced desire to have coaching assistance handy when he is busy on the field, and it also may provide a hint that rookies fit largely into the Indian scheme of things.

Shotton took a bunch of rookies and moulded them into a team that won the American Association pennant last season, and then went on to grab the little world series from Montreal of the International league.

He was an outfielder for 14 years, five with the Cardinals, eight with the Browns and one with Washington. From 1928 to 1933 he managed the Philadelphia Phillies. After serving the next year as coach with the Cincinnati Reds, he managed Rochester in 1935 and moved to Columbus in 1936

GIANTS CHANGE

JACKSONVILLE, Fla —(AP)— "If I can't do some good on this job in two years," I ought to get out."

With that as a starter, Bill Terry pitched into his new job today as boss of the New York Giants' farm operations, a job which he hopes will rebuild the National leaguers and put them back in the running as a pennant contender.

Leaving his newly-appointed successor, Mel Ott, to worry over the Giants, Terry tackled the farm problem which at the moment appeared to need more building than re-building. The Giants ownabout a half-dozen minor league clubs and Terry disclosed that the Giants are dickering for four more. He declined to name them or say whether working agreements or outright acquisition was contemplated.

"This is the work I have been wanting to do," said Terry last night, "and I feel sure that I can give Mel some ball players that will be a great deal better than what I have had to work with recently."

The surprise change in the Giant set-up, which broke on the eve of the 40th convention of the National Association of Baseball leagues, cost Terry a sizeable cut in salary. The former first-baseman, who succeeded the late John McGraw in 1932, had been receiving $42,000 a year. His new salary was not disclosed but was understood to be approximately $30,000 Terry's former contract, which had another year to run, was cancelled.

PRO DRAFT SLATED

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Annual draft of college players and make-up of the league of 1942 will be discussed when the American professional football league meets Friday and Saturday in Detroit, President Bill Griffith announced today.

BIG TEN CHANGES PLAY TO GET MORE SCORES

NEW YORK —(AP)— The Big Ten conference, says Lynn (Pappy) Waldorf of Northwestern, completely changed its football complexion from a defensive organization to a scoring conference during the season just closed.

"We had more spectators in the Big Ten last season than ever before and more touchdowns. The only thing wrong, Northwestern didn't have enough of the latter," Waldorf told the Northwestern Alumni club last night.

Cage Clinic Set Tonight

Tygers and Rams Join In Demonstration.

Mansfield basketball fans will get their first glimpse of the high school Tygers in action tonight when Coach Vern Hoffman's hoopsters join with the Madison Rams in a demonstration of offensive and defensive court systems at the high school gym at 7:30.

The demonstration, staged for the benefit of the Mansfield Downtown Coaches and the Madison Boosters club, is not only open to the general public, but all fans are invited to attend the free bucketball school.

Members of both teams will be introduced, and Coach Al Fendrick will then explain the zone defense with his Rams giving a demonstration of the workings of this method of defense. Hoffman and the Tygers will then show how the man-for-man defense works

Both teams will show the various types of offense designed to penetrate the zone and man-for-man defense.

Tyger Grid Coach Paul Snyder, who does a lot of basketball officiating during the winter, will explain the new rule changes, with the using the two teams to demonstrate the more important changes.

Madison opened its season last Friday night with a victory over Lexington while Mansfield high lifts its seasonal lid this Friday with Columbus South at the Mansfield gym.

Last night, speaking before a Madison high school Boosters' club meeting, Fendrick explained the set up to the boosters and said that, although he expects the Tygers will of course trip his Rams, the Madison players would give a good account of themselves—"if they don't get buck fever."

The club authorized purchase of 18 pairs of football shoes in order to prepare against future priorities which might prevent purchase of the best type of gridiron footwear.

Reports of the club's membership drive showed that more than 100 new members have been enrolled with campaigners on an "even" numbered team signing more than an "Odd" team. The "Odds" will set up a fish dinner to the "Evens" as a result.

Game Decided In Last Few Minutes of Play

Athletic Supplies Beat Sohioans While City News Trims O. P. S.

PUSHED to the limit by a fighting Yuncker team, the Westinghouse Electrics took the lead in the City basketball league by defeating the Sports 25 to 19 last night at the high school gym. The game was not decided until the final minutes of play. Both teams played heads-up ball and most of the time there was only a difference of a few points in the score.

Poole opened the Westies' scoring with a free throw but Roberts came back with a long shot for the Sports. Rudolph and Shade hit the strings to end the first period scoring at 5 to 2.

Four fouls and a bucket in the second stanza kept the Sports in the running while the Electrics tallied twice to lead 9 to 8 at the half.

The game was tied up at 10 all in the first few minutes of the third period and from there on out it was a nip and tuck battle which grew wilder with each minute of play. Both teams controlled the ball well and fought under the basket for the rebounds.

The Westies held a slight advantage in height but most of the points were made on one-hand shots from the foul circle. The Electrics iced the game in the final quarter when Howard Poole dumped in three one-handed shots.

Roberts led the scoring for the Sports with nine points followed by Boyd with five. Everyone on the Sports squad played a bang-up floor game. McCarty and Rudolph stood out for the Electrics on the hard wood.

In the first game of the evening the Blue Goose Sohioans took it on the chin from the fast-stepping Athletic Supply. Although the Athletics held a lead over the Sohioans for the entire game they didn't draw away to a safe margin until the last quarter.

The half time score stood at 20 to 10 for the Supplies but in the third period the Sohioans closed the gap to five points with a rally that threatened to take the lead. The Athletics came back strong with Morgan hitting the hoop three times and Mahon adding another to sew up the game at 35 to 26.

The game was interesting to watch as both teams set up their offenses and worked the ball into the basket.

The other game in the league series brought together the Ohio Public Service and the City News. Both teams were fighting to get out of a tie for the cellar position in the league.

The Newsies finished on the long end of a 29 ot 20 score to step out of the bottom niche. Both teams handled the ball very badly in the first half and this part of the game could be called "race-track" ball, up one side of the floor and down the other. In the second half both teams settled down and although many shots were missed the game turned out to be a real battle.

Bob Crawford was the big gun for the O. P. S., parting the strings for 13 points while Martin and Rose of the News team both garnered 11 apiece.

Pritchard, Butler forward, led the scoring with six field goals for 12 points followed by Harris veteran center from last year, with 9.

Trailing by four points at the last period, the Butler squad held Perrysville scoreless while tanking six points itself.

KEARNEY FOUGHT SUBS 3 HOURS

Navy Reveals Battle Against U-Boat Pack Before Ship Limped Into Port.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The U. S. destroyer Kearny fought for nearly three hours against a pack of German submarines before she was hit by a torpedo, an official navy report to congress revealed today.

The destroyer, almost cut in half by the explosion, limped into an Iceland port with her 10 dead and 11 wounded. The attack occurred on the night of Oct. 16-17.

The navy report—a letter from Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operation, to Chairman David I. Walsh, D., Mass., of the senate naval affairs committee—said the Kearny was on convoy duty and that "a number of merchant ships were damaged "and some of them sunk" during the battle.

Stark said that although American vessels were in the convoy "it may be stated . . . that no United States flag merchant ship was sunk at this time."

Walsh, who had asked for answers to a series of questions on the Kearny incident, released Stark's report without comment, except to say that so far as the senate's efforts to obtain information were concerned "the Kearny incident is closed."

He said, however, that he had written Stark asking for similar information about the sinking of the destroyer Reuben James which was sunk off Iceland with a loss of 100 officers and men.

FACES DRIVING CHARGE

MILLERSBURG — Harry Kinsey, living on the Nashville-Glenmont road, pleaded not guilty to driving while intoxicated when arraigned before Common Pleas Judge R. B. Putnam. His bond was fixed at $200 and trial date set for Dec. 7. He is being held in jail in default of bond. He was arrested by Sheriff Harry R. Weiss.

'Barber of Seville' to Aid Club's Music Scholarships

Started five years ago when the Mansfield Music Study club received a cash gift from a donor preferring to remain anonymous the scholarship fund of this organization has since enabled three young women to educate themselves for a career in music.

Financed solely through concerts sponsored by the club, the scholarship fund is again to be replenished Tuesday, Dec. 9, when the club brings the American Civic Opera company to Mansfield for two performances of "The Barber of Seville" at the Mansfield Senior high school auditorium.

This will be the fourth year that the club has sponsored a concert in behalf of the scholarship fund, according to Mrs. W. J. Hazeltine, chairman of the scholarship committee and the first president of the club.

"So far we have helped three local girls to pursue their study of music," Mrs. Hazeltine said. "Two are studying voice, one in New York and the other in Philadelphia, while the third formerly studied piano at Ohio State university."

"The scholarship fund loans money on a three-year basis," she explained, "to be repaid when the students are employed and financially able to take care of their loans." She added, however, that the loans may be renewed up to five years.

Mrs. Hazeltine made it clear, too, that "any advanced music student in the city who shows unusual promise and who agrees to make music their profession" may make application to the club for a scholarship.

The scholarship committee is composed of the past presidents of the organization and after the approval of this group the application is passed upon by the executive committee.

Mrs. Margaret Hall, a Mansfield piano teacher, appeared on the club's first scholarship fund concert four years ago in a two-piano program with a pianist from Baltimore, Md.

Kirk Ridge, another pianist, originally from Lucas, O., presented the second-year concert and last year the club offered Theodore Schaeffer, former organist at the Mansfield First Congregational church, in a program.

This year's scholarship fund benefit brings opera to Mansfield for the first time in 20 years. It will be presented by a company of artists, known in this country and abroad, under the direction of Reed Lawton and with Agata Borzi in the leading soprano role.

An afternoon performance for school children and an evening performance for adults are scheduled.

'Smokes for Yanks' Drive Starts

Scenes like this will be popular from now on as Mansfielders and Richland countians rally to provide "Smokes for Yanks." Sponsored by the Soldiers-Citizens' committee and the Home Service club to obtain cigarets enough to fill 1,000 Christmas cartons for Richland county men in service the drive for "Smokes" got underway here this week. Containers such as the one pictured here were placed throughout the city in places where cigarers are sold to receive the donations. Mrs. Lloyd Keifer is shown here depositing a package in a box stationed at the American Legion home. Boxes of this type were made by women of the Home Service club of which Mrs. Blanche Holmes is president.

Navy Cagers Under Tunney Meet Irish

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(ANS)—Accompanied by Lieut. Commander Gene Tunney, naval director of physical education and retired world's heavyweight boxing champion, the crack basketball squad of the U. S. naval training station at Great Lakes left today for South Bend, Ind., to meet the Notre Dame quintet tonight.

The squad of 25 in charge of Lieut. J. Russell Cook includes such former college stars as Jim Currie and Dick Klein of Northwestern; Bob White, former Dartmouth captain; Frank Baumholtz, Ohio U.; Forrest Anderson, Stanford, and Bob Calihan, Detroit.

Lieut. Commander Tunney will be the principal speaker at a brief ceremony between halves of tonight's game.

Big Ten Basketball Starts Saturday

CHICAGO — (AP) — Basketball will edge into the Western conference sports picture Saturday with two schools appearing in their 1941-42 openers and another, Wisconsin's Big Ten and national collegiate champion, making its second start of the infant season.

The Badgers, who whipped Carroll college, 56 to 35, in their debut Monday, will take on Marquette. Minnesota will start off against Millikin, defending Illinois college conference champ, and Chicago, with every regular except Joe Stampf, leading scorer in the conference last season, will oppose Illinois Tech.

ONLY 9 BUCKETBALL PLAYERS AT AKRON U.

AKRON —(AP)— If the University of Akron's basketball squad had one more man, it could hold a scrimmage without outside help.

Irv Kaplan, a sophomore guard, reported for duty to bring the team's roster up to nine. Coach Russ Beichley has been getting help from local high school squads in the practice sessions. He blames the lure of industrial jobs for the shortage of manpower.

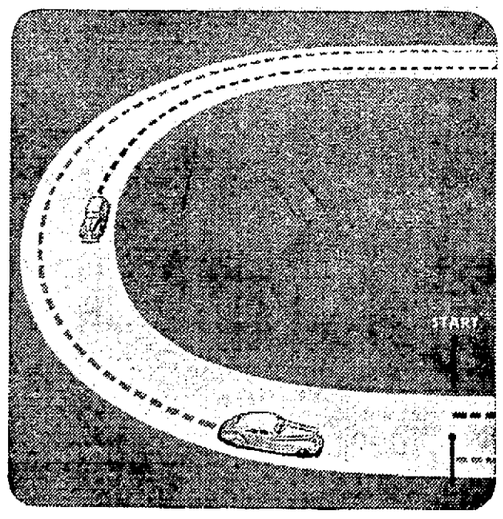
We Get Cream of the Used Car Crop Because the Smart Buyer Is Trading For Packard - See Selection Today!

Built for thrifty times!

'42 Packards give extra miles per gallon!



1942 the Winner! We thought the 1941 Packard was tops for thrift. (It was an economy champion.) But take a look at the results of an actual Proving Ground comparison with the 1942 Clipper. The same amount of gas was put in both cars. This true-scale diagram shows 1942 Clipper's economy margin!

COME IN TODAY AND SKIPPER THE CLIPPER!

NEW CLIPPER STYLING ... AT LOWER PRICES!

Clipper Styling—with all its beauty and advantages—is now extended to all Packard lines. It can be yours ... even in the lowest-priced Packards. Typical surprise: the '42 Clipper 8 is $79 less than the 1941 Clipper!

Economy improved amazingly by cutting wind drag nearly one-fifth. That's just one more feature Clipper styling offers. You gain 12% to 18% more miles per gallon of gas!

In 1942—more than ever before—you'll want to buy a car "for keeps." This year's models have all the famous Packard stamina ... and then some! They're the finest cars we've ever had on our salesroom floor!

BUYING WAVE SENDS STOCK MART UPWARD

Profit Taking Makes Gains Difficult For Leaders; Rails Pace Swing.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Drawing buying sustenance from its good performance Tuesday the stock market edged into slightly higher territory today, although in a number of the leaders progress was made difficult as a result of profit taking.

Bidding was fairly broad at the start and provided a good cushion for offerings of those eager to cash in their gains. The list turned a bit irregular near the second hour, but still held a preponderance of fractional gains. Rails, bellwethers of the previous day's upturn, were a shade higher.

Students of business trends noted that while electric power output for the week ended Nov. 29 rebounded 2.7 per cent above the previous week's outturn the rise did not come up to seasonal expectations.

Also receiving attention was the disclosure in the weekly report of the American Petroleum institute that stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline in Atlantic seaboard territory rose 210,000 barrels over the 19,225,000 barrels on hand the week before.
